A Letter from Bishop Brennan

Dear faithful of the Wheeling-Charleston Diocese,

We have reason to be grateful to God that some vaccines are now being made available to various segments of our American population and eventually to all who live here to inoculate them against the COVID-19 virus. I plan to get vaccinated when it’s my turn and I strongly urge all Catholics and other residents of West Virginia to do the same when they have the opportunity.

We must remember that in protecting ourselves through an effective vaccine we are also protecting others. Getting vaccinated, then, is a way of promoting the common good and putting into practice the commandment: Love your neighbor as yourself.

Some questions have arisen about a connection between COVID-19 vaccines and abortion. Bishop Kevin Rhoades and Archbishop Joseph Naumann, who chair the US Catholic Bishops’ Conference Committees on Doctrine and Pro-life Activities, respectively, issued a statement declaring that neither of the two vaccines now made available, from Pfizer and Moderna, used cell lines from aborted fetuses in the design, development or production of their vaccines. Each, however, used a cell line from an aborted fetus in confirmatory tests to determine the vaccine’s effectiveness. There is a connection to abortion but it is remote. Citing Roman documents, the Bishops conclude that it is morally permissible to use either of these two vaccines, especially given the gravity of the threat that the COVID-19 virus poses to our people and the lack of other remedies. You can read the Bishops’ full statement at https://www.usccb.org/moral-considerations-covid-vaccines.

To illustrate why we may in some circumstances benefit from a morally wrong action in which we did not directly participate and of which we do not approve, I offer a historical analogy. The Benedictine Sisters who taught me in high school lived in a convent that, in the early nineteenth century, was the home of a slave-owning family in Northeast Washington, DC. In the basement were chains and instruments used to punish slaves who worked on the family’s farm. Were the Sisters giving approval to slavery or the mistreatment of slaves because they lived in that home? Hardly. They supported civil rights and taught and nurtured the descendants of former slaves in the high school. But the Sisters did benefit from living in a house built and occupied by former slave owners. There is a connection to slavery but a very remote one.

Jesus told a parable about wheat and weeds (Matthew 13: 24-30). The master’s servants came to him to report that weeds were growing among the wheat. “An enemy has done this,” said the master. Should they pull up the weeds? “No,” said the master, “if you pull up the weeds you might uproot the wheat with them. Let them grow together until harvest.” Then the weeds would be burnt and the wheat gathered into the barn.

There is wisdom in this parable. We should avoid participating in the evil acts of others but we cannot wall ourselves off from the rest of the world. We will inevitably come into contact with persons and situations that are tainted with evil. We should never give material aid to someone doing wrong but we will sometimes be presented with a fait accompli: the wrong has already been done and we cannot change it. But because our connection to the wrongdoing is not material (that is, it did not help cause the wrong) nor is it close to us in time, we can, if reluctantly, accept a benefit from it. Receiving a COVID-19 vaccine that was tested using a morally compromised cell line is in that category.

Because abortion is a gravely wrong act, we should always oppose it and never give the appearance that we approve of it. Ideally, we would avoid even a remote connection to evil. The aforementioned Bishops and heads of many other organizations wrote the Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration last spring to urge that vaccines be developed and tested without even a remote connection to abortion. Why don’t you add your voice to theirs? (Commissioner, FDA, 10903 New Hampshire Ave., Silver Spring, MD 20993; or call 888-463-6332.) Fortunately, cell lines that do not come from aborted fetuses are available for pharmaceutical companies to use. Some vaccines based on them are in development but are not yet ready for production or distribution. In the meantime, the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines are morally legitimate to use, given the remoteness of their connection to the aborted babies and the urgent need to protect ourselves and others from a deadly disease.

A third vaccine, being developed by AstraZeneca, has used a cell line from an aborted baby in its design, development and production phases, so it is more immediately tied to an abortion. If at all possible, that vaccine should be avoided. Yet, as the Bishops point out, it may not be possible for the individual to choose which vaccine he or she receives, while the danger to the person and to other people remains grave if vaccination is long delayed or refused. Because the researchers and producers of the AstraZeneca vaccine did not abort the unborn child, but used that child’s cell line for their work, theirs is a more immediate connection to the evil of abortion but still not a material cooperation in it.

While we wait for our vaccinations, we should use the protective measures that can keep us from getting infected with the COVID-19 virus and from infecting others: washing our hands frequently, wearing face masks, not shaking hands, maintaining appropriate physical distancing and avoiding large crowds.

Let us continue to pray for the victims of this disease and their families, for our health care personnel and for others susceptible to the virus because of their type of work or their age or weak health. Pray, too, for an end to the pandemic and for a greater appreciation for the lives of all human beings, from the unborn to the elderly. God has given us life and breath. We ask Him to give us and all people good health, so we pray: Jesus, Divine Physician, have pity on your people!

Sincerely in Christ,

Mark E. Brennan

Pope at Christmas: Jesus’ Birth Brings Hope in Troubling Times

By Junno Arocho Esteves Catholic News Service

The birth of Christ is a gift from God that brings people hope and courage in troubled times, Pope Francis said Christmas Eve.

“Underlying all our strengths and weaknesses, stronger than all our past hurts and failures or our fears and concerns about the future, there is this great truth,” the pope said in his homily Dec. 24 as he celebrated the nighttime liturgy.

“We are beloved sons and daughters. God’s love for us does not, and never will, depend upon us. It is completely free love, pure grace,” he said.

The nighttime Mass, which is often referred to as “midnight Mass” has not been celebrated at midnight at the Vatican since 2009. However, the traditional Christmas liturgy began much earlier than past years — at 7:30 p.m. local time — so that those invited to attend could get home in time to observe Italy’s 10 p.m. curfew.

Much like the liturgies during the Easter season, the pope celebrated a pared-down Christmas Mass at the Altar of the Chair in the back of the basilica. Some 200 people, including bishops and cardinals concelebrating, were present, all donning masks and observing social distancing regulations.

The Mass began with the Christmas proclamation of Jesus’ birth, known as the “kalenda.” The pope then lifted a cloth, revealing a life-sized statue of the baby Jesus, which he reverently kissed and blessed with incense.

Despite the more subdued Christmas Mass, the ornate bouquets of poinsettias adorning the Altar of the Chair, along with the sound of sacred music and the bells of St. Peter’s ringing during the “Glory to God” brought an air of joyful celebration in uncertain times.

In his homily, the pope said Christ’s coming is like the birth of a child which is such a joyous and exciting occasion that it “makes us think nothing of weariness, discomfort and sleepless nights.”

“That is what Christmas is: the birth of Jesus is the ‘newness’ that enables us to be reborn each year and to find, in him, the strength needed to face every trial,” he said.

Reflecting on the day’s readings, the pope noted that those who proclaim the birth of the Savior often use the phrase “for us.” For Christians, he said, those words mean “that the Son of God, the one who is holy by nature, came to make us, as God’s children, holy by grace.”

“Yes, God came into the world as a child to make us children of God,” the pope said. “What a magnificent gift! This day, God amazes us and says to each of us: ‘You are amazing.’”

Despite this great gift, he continued, at times humanity’s injustice toward those less fortunate may give rise to doubts whether God was “right in giving us so much.” Nevertheless, the Lord does this knowing people’s limitations “because he is madly in love with us.”

“This is his secret for entering our hearts,” the pope said. “God knows that we become better only by accepting his unfailing love, an unchanging love that changes us. Only the love of Jesus can transform our life, heal our deepest hurts and set us free from the vicious circles of disappointment, anger and constant complaint.”

Recalling the night of Jesus’ birth in “the lowly manger of a darkened stable,” Pope Francis questioned why the “greatest of kings” was born “without decent accommodation, in poverty and rejection.”

God, he answered, “loves to work wonders through our poverty” and placed “the whole of our salvation in the manger of a stable.”

“The Son of God was born an outcast, in order to tell us that every outcast is a child of God,” he said. “He came into the world as each child comes into the world, weak and vulnerable, so that we can learn to accept our weaknesses with tender love.”

Continuing his homily, the pope also reflected on Christ’s birthplace and noted that the meaning of the city’s name, “Bethlehem” — which means “house of bread” in Hebrew — serves as a reminder of humanity’s need for God “like the bread we eat.”

“How often instead, in our hunger for entertainment, success and worldly pleasures, do we nourish life with food that does not satisfy and leaves us empty within!” he exclaimed.

“It is true; in our endless desire for possessions, we run after any number of mangers filled with ephemeral things, and forget the manger of Bethlehem,” the pope said. “That manger, poor in everything yet rich in love, teaches that true nourishment in life comes from letting ourselves be loved by God and loving others in turn.”

Pope Francis said that in choosing to come into the world as a vulnerable child, God wanted to encourage men and women to “care for others” and comfort the “tears of the suffering.”

“God came among us in poverty and need, to tell us that in serving the poor, we will show our love for him,” the pope said.
Diocese of Wheeling-Charleston Offers a Special Christmas Message This Year

Strong Faith Presented in Song

By Joyce Bibey

We are blessed in the Diocese of Wheeling-Charleston with countless parishioners who share their musical talents each week at Mass. Since we are in the midst of a pandemic their voices and instruments have nearly been silenced. However, more than 40 faithful from around the state believe that when you are given a gift from God you know you need to share that gift no matter what.

They collaborated with Bishop Mark Brennan to “sing and make music from the heart to the Lord (Ephesians 5:19).”

This gift of song was presented as a Christmas message video to all the faithful in West Virginia. These individuals and all those who they represent in the music ministries in our parishes epitomize FaithInWV!

“Despite all the challenges everyone has faced this past year, our faith is still strong among Catholics in WV,” Katie Shaffer, of St. Paul Parish in Weirton said. “Being able to ‘come together’ in the Christmas video from all over the state, representing different parishes and age groups, proves we are not alone on this faith journey, even though physical distancing has kept us apart. We are stronger together even if virtually. This year some of us may not be able to perform in parishes like we normally do, as cantors or instrumentalists due to the COVID-19 parish restrictions, but we found a way to make it beautiful music together despite the pandemic. We are open to new ways of celebrating our faith and not losing faith during difficult times.”

Mark Haas, who helped orchestrate the production and played the timpani (kettle drum), said all who participated were eager to do so for their fellow parishioners, the state, and Bishop Brennan.

“This video vividly shows the assembly of God’s people – from every walk of life – under the humble leadership of His earthly shepherd, Bishop Brennan,” said Haas, who also serves as the director of music for the Co-Cathedral of the Sacred Heart in Charleston. “My hope is that this video might kindle a fire in many hearts, and perhaps bring some sheep back home.”

He said the video was a chance to live out what God teaches us, especially in Psalm 100: We are His people, the sheep of His flock.

“It’s hard to be Christian in today’s world,” Haas said. “Sometimes I feel like the only one ‘plowing the field.’ This video is a reminder to me that the Church of God has many members, but one body. The eye or the hand can’t say to the body, ‘I don’t need you!’ We need each other. And this video, which demonstrates the active faith in West Virginia, is something we all needed to see this Christmas. Hallelujah!”

Haas’s wife, a music teacher at Sacred Heart Grade School in Charleston, eagerly shared her gift of song with the faithful in West Virginia.

“The song is about the story of Jesus coming at Christmas time to bring a renewed hope to the world and how we can give praise and thanksgiving to God for the gift of his Son,” she said. “My faith has always been the most important thing in my life. I was brought up in the Church and began singing when I was nine years old at the Cathedral of St. Joseph, Wheeling. It was there that I started ministering through music which has allowed me to pray openly to my community that I belong to. Just like I tell my students at school using the words of St. Augustine, ‘When you sing you pray twice.’ That has always rung true for me.”

She said making time to be part of the production was important to her to not only bring joy to people in the season of Christmas, but also to encourage them to live like Christ taught us.

“I also believe that as I have become a mother to now five children I have had to lean on God through my ministry to my children. ‘Hallelujah’ is Hebrew for ‘Praise God.’ The song describes the coming Joy and Love that is God himself. ‘With every breath I’m singing, Hallelujah, I’m an action I hope to inspire my own children to take every day of their lives.’

Stephen Pishner, music director for All Saints Parish in Bridgeport, said those in the music ministry take pride in bringing a heightened message from Christ to the people through song during the Mass and special performances outside the Mass.

“We have a unique role to help people and (through this and our parish videos) give them hope,” he said. “It’s a humbling experience. It is our gift to people and God.”

Sharing the gift of music is always special, but in this case, it was a spiritually moving experience, according to Shaffer.

Poverty, Not Presents, is at Heart of Christmas Celebration, Pope Says

The Christmas tree is seen as Pope Francis leads the Angelus from the window of his studio overlooking St. Peter's Square at the Vatican Dec. 20. The pope said that current restrictions caused by the COVID-19 pandemic can help people put Christ, rather than the constant need to purchase gifts, at the center of the Christmas season.

By Junno Arocho Esteves, Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Current restrictions due to the COVID-19 pandemic can help people put Christ, and not the constant need to purchase gifts, at the center of the Christmas season, Pope Francis said. During his Sunday Angelus address Dec. 20, the pope told pilgrims gathered in St. Peter’s Square that instead of complaining orbuying “the unupteenth gift for ourselves and our friends,” Christians should do something for the less fortunate “whom no one thinks of.”

“In order for Jesus to be born in us, let’s prepare our hearts, let’s pray, let’s not be swept up by consumerism,” he said. “It is Jesus that is important. Consumerism is not found in the manger in Bethlehem: there is reality, poverty, love.”

Before concluding his address, the pope called on the international community to help hundreds of thousands of maritime workers who are “stranded on ships, beyond the terms of their contracts, and are unable to return home” due to the pandemic.

“I ask the Virgin Mary, Stella Maris, to comfort these people and all those in difficult situations, and I urge governments to do all they can to enable them to return to their loved ones,” he said.

According to the U.N. International Maritime Organization (IMO), an estimated 400,000 seafarers around the world are stranded on their ships while a “similar number of seafarers are stuck at home, unable to join ships and provide for their families.”

In a statement marking Human Rights Day Dec. 10, Kitack Lim, IMO secretary general, said that while maritime workers have been on the frontline of the pandemic, delivering food, medicine and goods, their “human rights have been put in jeopardy.”

“Failure to protect the rights of seafarers, fishers and other marine personnel and resolve the crew change crisis will have a detrimental effect on ship safety and the global supply chain. The longer the situation persists, the worse those effects will be,” Lim said.

In his talk before praying the Angelus prayer, the pope reflected on the Sunday Gospel reading from St. Luke which recounted the Annunciation. While the angel’s announcement that she will bear the son of God was one of joy, it also foretold a great trial for Mary.

Mary’s response was not resignation nor did she “express a weak and submissive acceptance, but rather she expresses a strong desire, a vivacious desire.”

“She does not submit to God, she binds herself to God. She is a woman in love, prepared to serve her Lord completely and immediately,” he said. “She could have asked for a little time to think about it, or even for more explanations about what would happen; perhaps she could have set some conditions. Instead, she does not take time, she does not keep God waiting, she does not delay.”

Pope Francis said that Mary’s promptness in accepting God’s will is an invitation for Christians to not procrastinate, especially in spiritual life when one is tempted to leave “bits of charity or prayer for the next day.”

“Today, on the threshold of Christmas, Mary invites us not to postpone, but to say ‘yes,’” the pope said. “Every ‘yes’ costs something, every ‘yes’ has its cost, but it always costs less than that which courageous and prompt ‘yes’ cost her, that ‘let it be to me according to your word,’ which brought us salvation.”

“To be able to collaborate with musicians from across the state who I don’t get to perform with regularly was a great experience and I was happy to be asked to be a part of it,” she said. “I’ve been playing flute for Masses since I was in grade school. Sadly, this was the first year since grade school which I haven’t been able to play at Mass (due to the pandemic), so to be able to come together this way and share my talent in this video was uplifting to me. The video illustrates that we are all one in God’s eyes,” she said and added. “From Bishop Brennan playing the piano to the children singing, we are all children of God, no matter what our earthly status is. We are all on this journey of faith together.”

Shaffer’s thoughts may summarize the spirit of all those involved, when she said, “Even though the world may have stopped this year….our faith never stops. God never stops being there for us no matter what we are experiencing. Even though some feel there isn’t much to celebrate about this past year, this video reminds me to not lose faith, especially during the difficult times, and to focus on the positive things that have happened in my life as a result of the pandemic.”

Those involved in the video include: Mark Haas (Cross Lanes), Chris Cendana (Ona), Joey Carter (Wheeling), Robert Phipps (Morgantown), Audrey Blust (Huntington), children from Sacred Heart Grade School (Charleston), Hannah Diefenbougher (Wheeling), Patty Frame (South Charleston), Carla Guthrie (Charleston), Renae Haas (Cross Lanes), Kevin Harris (Shepherdstown), Brian Kaltenbaugh (Martinsburg), Brandon Leroy (Bridgeport), Nancy McLaughlin (South Charleston), Mary Odim (South Charleston), Carrie Oliver-Shultz (Weirton), Gabby Payne (Wheeling), Stephen Pishner (Bridgeport), Jeanie Walter (South Charleston), Bishop Mark Brennan (Wheeling), Matthew Berher (Wheeling), Chad Carter (Wheeling), John Dever (South Charleston), Ashley Descoll (Bridgeport), Christine Hummer (Beckley), Phil Wyatt (Stonewood), Tim Bishop (Wheeling), Julia Pinn (Morgantown), and the St. Francis De Sales Parish Handbell Choir (Morgantown), which includes Pinn, Donna Kinsey, Nicholas Blumish, Natalie Buckley, Mary Hayward, Emily Raque, Maggie Raque, Steve Raque, Diane Raque, Ariana Romito, Andreas Schmid, and Karen Stratton.

Inwood Knights of Columbus Collect More Than 500 Coats for Kids

By Colleen Rowan

INWOOD—Children in need all over the country will have warm coats this winter through the efforts of the Knights of Columbus. In the Eastern Panhandle, the St. Leo Knights of Columbus Council No. 10756 collected 40 cases of coats for various counties through donations and in conjunction with a matching program by the Knights Supreme Council.

“The 40 cases are equivalent to over 500 coats for children in need,” said Council No. 10756 Grand Knight Gregory Hilleary.

The coats, he said, were delivered to the Catholic Charities West Virginia regional office in Martinsburg Nov. 21 and have been distributed to those most in need in the counties of Morgan, Hampshire, Jefferson, Berkeley, and Clay.

“We want to thank everyone who supported the St. Leo Knights ... this year, especially during a time of extremes everyone is facing,” Hilleary said. “The sharing support and love shown by so many is truly appreciated. We cannot thank everyone enough.”

The project is an annual program supported by the Knights of Columbus. Fundraising began in October within St. Leo Parish in Inwood and in the local community. This year, the council partnered with Kings Pizza in Inwood, the Black Dog Coffee Company, and Junction Mercantile in Shenandoah Junction.

Knights of Columbus councils around the state also participated in the project.
Sisters of the Infant Jesus
Collecting Beads for Zimbabwe

CLARKSBURG—The Sisters of the Infant Jesus at Immaculate Conception Parish in Clarksburg are in need of religious items to send back to Zimbabwe. “This country, which is on the verge of starvation and genocide, is one of the poorest lands in Africa,” parish officials said. “Do you have extra rosaries (intact or broken) or religious medals? Consider donating them for distribution to Zimbabwe Catholics. Your help in this endeavor would be greatly appreciated! This is from our hands directly into hands that are not able to afford or find these items which we take for granted.” There will be a basket in the back of the church for Beads for Zimbabwe, or call the parish for information on how to donate.

Contemplating the Closeness of the Incarnation in a Year of Separation

By Colleen Campbell, Catholic News Service

Separation. It is a reality of life that most of us have encountered in some form in 2020. Whether we have been separated from our families, friends or loved ones, found ourselves removed from our regular routines or felt the symptoms of disconnection from others that manifest spiritually and emotionally, separation has been a prominent feature of this year.

Even after a year where separation has been such a visceral everyday phenomenon, our Christmas and holiday season also will most likely succumb to this reality.

Unlike previous years, Christmas might look like responding to a Zoom meeting invitation instead of Christmas dinner, a lengthy phone call instead of swapping stories by the Christmas tree or cooking a family recipe from afar on FaceTime.

After such a long year, it can feel daunting to think about a Christmas that looks different from years past, with empty chairs instead of our loved ones' presences.

What meaning is there for us in Christmas this year when so much of our lives have been characterized by the experience of separation? How could we possibly find God in the suffering of separation, especially in a season that for many us is often spent in closeness with others?

It can be easy not to give Christmas a second thought, especially this year; we can become desensitized to the story of the Nativity, of the plight of Mary and Joseph looking for shelter so Mary could give birth, and the willingness of God to descend into smallness.

It can be tempting to think of Christmas as a time designated particularly for children and families because of its focus on connection and gathering. This year, it might feel easier to dismiss Christmas than to consider its differences from other years.

However, this year, Christmas' richness in meaning is perhaps most intended for those feeling separated, isolated and disconnected.

Christmas gives to our faith the mystery of the Incarnation: God becomes man. From Christmas, we learn that God is not only the creator of the heavens and earth, the confounder of pharaohs and kings, and the alpha and the omega.

We discover that God is also a baby clutching his mother’s finger, and an infant reaching out to be picked up and cuddled.

At the heart of Christmas, we see the illusion of separation conquered by a God who comes near to us. Through the mystery of God incarnate, Jesus Christ, we encounter a God who not only draws near to us, grasping not at his power to exploit it over us but grasping for relationship with us.

In theology, this act of God reaching out for us is sometimes called “the scandal” of the Incarnation. It is scandalous that a divinity should stoop so low, to be so close, to cry, sweat and bleed, and to make himself so vulnerable.

But to a God who comes so close, scandal is just illusion: the separation of God and man.

Christmas is a celebration of the infinite love of God, a love that is unbounded, a love that loosens limitations and dissolves boundaries. It is the feast of a God whose love obscures the separation between divinity and humanity, God and man.

What does the meaning of the Incarnation invite us to this year?

It invites us to rediscover that God is infinite, surpassing time and every earthly reality but stooping low enough to be contained in the flesh of a newborn baby.

It calls us to reflect on how though we might be separated from our loved ones now, we are brought hope because of the mystery of the Incarnation.

It challenges us that, though we cannot embrace our loved ones now, we can embrace a person who arrives to meet us on Christmas: hope himself.

As Pope Francis reminded us in his March 2020 “urbi et orbi” blessing in the midst of the crisis of the pandemic, “Embracing the Lord in order to embrace hope: That is the strength of faith, which frees us from fear and gives us hope.”

Archbishop Naumann: Vaccine Objectors Still Have ‘Responsibility to Protect Public Health’

By Carol Zimmermann Catholic News Service

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Four days after issuing a joint statement with another bishop saying the Pfizer and Moderna COVID-19 vaccines were acceptable and could be taken “as an act of charity,” Archbishop Joseph F. Naumann of Kansas City, Kansas, reiterated this message noting there had been some misunderstanding about it.

Some interpreted the Dec. 14 statement to say Catholics had a moral obligation to receive the vaccine.

“The short answer is we don’t have a moral obligation” to do so, the archbishop told Catholic News Service Dec. 18. He said the intent of the statement “was to show it is permissible to use these vaccines. What we do say is that there is a moral obligation to work for the common good.”

The vaccine statement was issued by Archbishop Naumann, chairman of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops’ Committee on Pro-Life Activities, and Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades of Fort Wayne-South Bend, Indiana, chairman of the USCCB’s Committee on Doctrine.

The bishops, responding to questions about moral concerns about vaccines produced by Pfizer-BioNTech and Moderna, said the two were not directly connected to cell lines that originated with tissue taken from abortions, but there was a remote connection as both vaccines relied on an aborted fetal cell in one of the confirmatory lab tests.

Regarding a third vaccine being developed by the University of Oxford and AstraZeneca, the bishops said this vaccine is “more morally compromised” and “should be avoided” if there are alternatives available.

Colorado’s Catholic bishops went a step further to say this vaccine was “not a morally valid option because better options are available.”

Many people have disparaged the USCCB statement, particularly on social media. Archbishop Naumann said his friends in the pro-life movement also have been critical of it.

“I appreciate their passion,” he said.

He said he and Bishop Rhoades were “trying to help people understand they can conscientiously object” to COVID-19 vaccines and make their advocacy against it clear, but if they do so, “they have a responsibility to protect public health and need to look at other ways to do that to not contract or transmit the virus.”

He also said they tried to be clear in expressing that the church has a “rich tradition in evaluating moral obligation” and principles of cooperation with evil.

Those who make vaccines, he said, have a responsibility not to use cell lines from aborted fetuses. For vaccine recipients, he said, “their cooperation with evil is very remote” with these COVID-19 vaccines.

In their joint statement, he and Bishop Rhoades said it was important to note such cell lines do not involve cells “taken directly from the body of an aborted child” and were derived from tissue samples taken from two abortions in the 1960s. Cells from these cell lines are stimulated to produce the chemicals necessary for a vaccine, they explained.

“It is not as if the making of the vaccine required ever more cells from ever more abortions.”

However, Archbishop Naumann also emphasized in his interview with CNS that while it is permissible to receive the COVID-19 vaccines now available, recipients should voice their protests to pharmaceutical companies and the government about the need to be provided with “untainted vaccines.”

Maryland’s Catholic bishops issued a Dec. 12 statement that said: “A Catholic can in good conscience receive these COVID-19 vaccinations if the person at all stages.”

They added that it is “imperative that pharmaceutical companies be urged to develop vaccines that fully respect the dignity of the human person at all stages.”

And on Dec. 21, the Vatican’s Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith said that when alternative vaccines are not available, it is morally acceptable to receive COVID-19 vaccines developed or tested using cell lines originating from aborted fetuses.

“The licit use of such vaccines does not and should not in any way imply that there is a moral endorsement of the use of cell lines proceeding from aborted fetuses,” it said.

Archbishop Naumann told CNS the vaccination discussion overall has been positive because it has enlightened a lot of people about how all vaccines are linked to compromised Catholics about their “obligation to advocate for morally untainted vaccines” especially since he said it is not necessary to use cell lines from aborted fetuses in vaccine production.

When asked if he would get the COVID-19 vaccine, the archbishop said he had asked his own doctor about it. His doctor didn’t think it was necessary right now because the archbishop got COVID-19 and had at least temporarily built up antibodies against it.

“It’s not something I would wish on anyone,” he said of the disease, which he said he recovered from after plenty of rest and his own immune system’s work.

He said advocacy work surrounding vaccines will continue.

During the pandemic, he said, he has been impressed with the overall care for the elderly who are “most vulnerable to the disease.”

“As a society, we took extra steps to protect them; I take that as a positive sign,” he said.
