At the end of his celebration of Mass at the Undo's Upper Ohio Valley Italian Heritage Festival July 25, Bishop Mark E. Brennan announced that Pope Francis declared the Sunday closest to the feast of Saints Ann and Joachim, the parents of the Blessed Virgin Mary and the grandparents of Jesus Christ, should be a special day to recognize grandparents and the elderly.

"Recognize their role in our lives and all that they do, especially in this state where many grandparents are raising their grandchildren," the bishop said. "This is the very first Sunday that we are going to honor grandparents and the elderly."

The bishop asked them to stand for a blessing, and then prayed: "Lord God, we thank you for the gift of our elders and grandparents who love their grandchildren and pass on the faith to them. We ask that as they look on their lives, they find many reasons to praise you for their blessings. And as they look forward, they may find reasons also to hope in the fulfillment of all your promises. And all of this we ask in Christ our Lord. And may God bless you all."

This was the first celebration of World Day for Grandparents and the Elderly.

Vatican Reports $78 Million Deficit, also Releases APSA Report

By Junno Arocho Esteves, Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The Vatican reported the Roman Curia had a $78 million deficit in 2020, and on the same day, the Administration of the Patrimony of the Holy See, which administers Vatican properties and investments, made a summary of its annual budget public for the first time.

Releasing both reports July 24, the Vatican said the coronavirus pandemic had a serious negative impact on the Vatican's financial situation, including the 66.3 million euros ($78 million) deficit in the consolidated budget report for 2020.

In an interview with Vatican News, Bishop Nunzio Galantino, president of the Administration of the Patrimony of the Holy See, known by its Italian initials APSA, said making the budget synthesis public was "a step forward in the direction of transparency and sharing."

"The release of the balance sheet is a sign of great respect for all those who, with trust and generosity, have placed and continue to place part of their resources in the hands of the Catholic Church," Bishop Galantino said.

"I harbor a secret hope: I hope that the publication and reading of the numbers and the important notes that accompany them will foster more correct and complete information," he added.

In 2019, Italian journalist and author Gianluigi Nuzzi claimed in his book "Giudizio Universale" ("Universal Judgment") that decades of mismanagement of the Vatican's investment portfolio and real estate holdings by APSA would leave the Vatican no choice but to default by 2023.

APSA directly administers 4,051 properties in Italy and entrusts to outside companies the administration of some 1,200 properties in London, Paris, Geneva and Lausanne, Switzerland, the Vatican report said.

During the 2020 fiscal year, APSA reported a profit of almost 22 million euros ($25.8 million), compared to 73.21 million euros in 2019.

Aside from the economic challenges posed by the pandemic — including a need to reduce the rents of businesses that could not function during lockdown — Bishop Galantino told Vatican News the drop in its income was largely due to the "changing behavior of the securities market."

Jesuit Father Juan Antonio Guerrero Alves, prefect of the Secretariat for the Economy, told Vatican News his office was committed to providing as much detailed information as possible.

"We come from a culture of secrecy, but we have learned that in economic matters transparency protects us more than secrecy," he said.

While 2020 was not a good year, he said, the Roman Curia's budget deficit was "better than what we expected."

Before the pandemic, he explained, the Vatican projected a budget deficit of 53 million euros. However, in the midst of the pandemic, the office figured the best-case scenario would be a deficit of 68 million euros while the worst case would be a deficit of 146 million euros.

"Instead, with a deficit of 66.3 million euros, the end result was slightly better than the projected best-case scenario, and decisively better than what we had projected in the revised budget in March," Father Guerrero said.

While most Vatican offices reduced costs during the year, Father Guerrero also noted that in 2019 the Peter's Pence collection was used to subsidize 32% of Vatican dicasteries' expenses, while in 2020 it was used to cover only 24%.

Furthermore, despite the economic difficulties and orders to Vatican offices to reduce spending, the congregations for Eastern Churches and for the Evangelization of Peoples increased the aid sent to local churches experiencing even greater difficulty.

The coronavirus pandemic "has given us the possibility of being able to provide additional help at a difficult moment for all humanity, thus making the church present in areas with fewer resources to deal with the pandemic," Father Guerrero said.

"The economic situation was worse, but the mission expanded. This is further proof that the criteria driving the church are not economic," he said.

Bishop Brennan Celebrates Mass at Wheeling's Italian Heritage Festival

By Colleen Rowan

WHEELING—Before beginning his celebration of Mass for the Undo's Upper Ohio Valley Italian Heritage Festival July 25, Bishop Mark E. Brennan wished all good morning in Italian.

This was the first time he celebrated the annual Mass, which is held on the Sunday morning of the festival at Wheeling Heritage Port on the Ohio River. The music was provided by the choir from the Cathedral of St. Joseph in Wheeling. The Knights of Columbus Carroll Council of Wheeling participated in the celebration as well.

Bishop Brennan shared with the congregation that he lived in Italy for four years while studying for the priesthood and found the people to be hospitable and friendly.

As he began his homily, Bishop Brennan said that the first reading and the gospel talk about miracles that involve food: Elisha, the prophet feeds 100 people with 20 small barley loaves (2 Kgs 4:42-44); Jesus feeds 5,000 men along with their wives and children with five barley loaves and two fish (Jn 6:1-15).

"In both of these cases, these miracles, God shows his loving care for his children by providing food for them; and as Elisha said, 'They shall eat and there shall be some left over' (2 Kgs 4:42-44).

"I would wager that the food left over from this Italian festival would feed a small army," the bishop said.

Then noting the gospel (Jn 6:1-15) in which Jesus feeds the crowds that followed him, the bishop said St. John calls this miracle a sign.

"A sign points to something," Bishop Brennan emphasized. "In this case it was supposed to move those who ate the bread and the fish to wonder about who Jesus really was. The crowds did grasp that Jesus was the prophet, 'the one who is to come into the world.' But they left his mission on a purely worldly level. They wanted to make him king to free them from the Romans and taxes. And as Jesus would tell them the next day ... You are looking for me not because you saw signs that point to the miracle, but because you ate the loaves and you were filled."

Bishop Mark E. Brennan celebrates Mass at Wheeling Heritage Port during the Undo's Upper Ohio Valley Italian Heritage Festival July 25.

The crowds, the bishop said, missed Jesus's spiritual mission entirely: the good news that he was preaching to arouse their faith in him as their savior from sin and death. They looked only on the fulfillment of their earthly needs.

"My fellow believers in Jesus Christ, we must avoid the same error," Bishop Brennan said.

Over the next several Sundays, the bishop said, the faithful will hear of the Bread of Life Discourse from Chapter 6 of St. John's Gospel, which explores different aspects of Jesus's presence in our lives, especially in the sacrament of the altar.

"He is our bread of life," Bishop Brennan said, "but in several ways his teachings feed our minds and hearts. His way of life, his example nourishes our spirits. And in his most personal, intense presence in the Eucharist, he enters into us to build us up to continue our journey of faith. He wants us to put our faith in him so that we may be forgiven our sins, overcome them in practice, learn how to love one another as he loves us, and be fit for the everlasting life his father prepared for us."

That's what the crowd following Jesus missed, the bishop said. "We must not miss it," he said, "but see in his blessings in this life an anticipation of the joy of the new life that awaits us."

The bishop then spoke of showing gratitude to God and that this is seen in our imitation of God's goodness and in our treatment of others.

Jesus joined the two commandments of loving God and loving neighbor, Bishop Brennan said. Because to love God one must love his or her neighbor, and one cannot truly love his or her neighbor if he or she disparages God.

"Our brothers and sisters in faith who run food pantries and clothing centers around this diocese, who bring holy Communion to the homebound, or who instruct young people in the faith," Bishop Brennan said, "they understand the unity of faith and love. By his teachings and example in the sacraments, especially in the Eucharist, the Lord Jesus feeds us. We in turn are to feed others in daily helpings of our love."

Bishop Brennan closed his homily by sharing a memory from a parish he served before becoming bishop of Wheeling-Charleston. The memory, he said, has spoken to him over the years of the unity of love of God and love of neighbor.

The bishop recalled that as Mass was being celebrated in the church, just below in the parish hall a soup kitchen was wrapping up with volunteers cleaning and some clients lingering and having coffee.

"What struck me ... was as some disciples in the church were praising and thanking God other disciples in the hall below were being a blessing to homeless persons and poor families who came to that soup kitchen to eat," Bishop Brennan said.

"My brothers and sisters in Christ, God has blessed us in many ways and more blessings await us," he said. "May his example move us to be a blessing to others in need."

At the end of the Mass, Bishop Brennan expressed well wishes to all in Italian.

N.J. Archdiocese Says it has Requested but Not Yet Received Data, Analysis

By Catholic News Service

NEWARK, N.J. (CNS) — The Archdiocese of Newark said July 28 it had “formally requested,” but not yet received, the data and analysis used by a publisher for its report on “possible inappropriate software app use by certain clergy within the archdiocese.”

“Therefore, we are unable to review the reported information until data is provided,” the archdiocese said in a statement.

The publisher is The Pillar, an online outlet that covers the Catholic Church and provides news and analysis.

The Newark Archdiocese said it was informed by the publisher that its report “is based on the collection of app use data on mobile devices in certain locations.”

“Many consider this data collection to be controversial and morally suspect due to its potential to harm the reputations of innocent individuals who may not have engaged in misconduct of any kind,” the archdiocese said July 28 and in an earlier statement.

“Although the purported information conveyed to the archdiocese does not provide any evidence of misconduct by archdiocesan clergy or employees, we recognize that any app or technology has the potential for misuse or abuse, which would be of concern.”

“This matter is to be evaluated and further reviewed,” it said, “pending the receipt of the publisher’s data and analysis.”

“We are committed to protecting the faithful,” the archdiocese added, “and when we learn of any immoral behavior or misconduct, we immediately take appropriate measures to address concerns and reinforce this commitment.”

On July 23, The Pillar said it contacted the Newark Archdiocese “after a review of commercially available app signal data showed patterns of location-based hookup app use at more than 10 archdiocesan rectories and clerical residences during 2018, 2019 and 2020. There are 212 parishes in the Newark Archdiocese.”

The online outlet said it had “legally obtained” the analysis of commercially available signal data and had confirmed its “authenticity.”

The data, it said, “shows evidence that both homosexual and heterosexual hookup apps were used in parish rectories or other clerical residences with a frequency suggesting, in several cases, residence in those locations.”

The Pillar said the names, addresses or telephone numbers “of particular users” are not identified, but the data collected and sold with “the consent of users can include the usage location of particular devices at particular times.”

“Without compelling public interest regarding individual priests serving in archdiocesan ministries, The Pillar did not undertake to de-anonymize data about parish rectory app usage,” the outlet said in its report.

Newark Cardinal Joseph W. Tobin, in response to a question July 28, said that anyone using such apps does so in violation of the promises they made when ordained or entered religious life.

The question was asked during a Georgetown University panel discussion on Catholics and the reception of the Eucharist.

“I think ... if someone who made a promise of celibacy has a dating app on his or her phone, that is asking for trouble,” the cardinal said.

He also questioned the ethics “around the collection of this data of people who allegedly may have broken their promises.”

“Certainly, the information that has been shared with the archdiocese is very general and I can’t comment on that,” the cardinal said.

The Pillar report on the Newark Archdiocese came three days after a similar Pillar report had triggered the resignation of a high-ranking U.S. Catholic official July 20.

Msgr. Jeffrey D. Burrill resigned his post as general secretary at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington after the conference was contacted by The Pillar regarding evidence the news outlet claimed to have found showing the priest had “engaged in serial sexual misconduct” while overseeing, it asserted, church response to the sex abuse scandal.

Archbishop José H. Gomez of Los Angeles, USCCB president, said in a July 20 memo to bishops that he had accepted Msgr. Burrill’s resignation, effective immediately.

“What was shared with us did not include allegations of misconduct with minors. However, in order to avoid becoming a distraction to the operations and ongoing work of the conference, Monsignor has resigned,” the archbishop said.

“The conference takes all allegations of misconduct seriously and will pursue all appropriate steps to address them,” he said.

“An analysis of app data signals correlated to Burrill’s mobile device shows the priest also visited gay bars and private residences while using a location-based hookup app in numerous cities from 2018 to 2020, even while traveling on assignment for the U.S. bishops’ conference,” The Pillar reported.

As it noted later with regard to information it said it had on clergy in the Newark Archdiocese, The Pillar said in its story on Msgr. Burrill that commercially available app signal data “does not identify the names of app users, but instead correlates a unique numerical identifier to each mobile device using particular apps.”

The Pillar also has similarly reported on an analysis of data on “the use of location-based hookup apps” within Vatican City, saying it shows “that during a period of 26 weeks in 2018, at least 32 mobile devices emitted serially occurring hookup or dating app data signals from secured areas and buildings of the Vatican ordinarily inaccessible to tourists and pilgrims.”

The Pillar reports have sparked a fresh discussion about journalism ethics and also sparked a backlash from a variety of religious media outlets and individual writers concerned over national security-level surveillance tools being used to track church staff.

Steven P. Millies, associate professor of public theology and director of the Bernardin Center at Catholic Theological Union in Chicago, wrote a scathing essay critical of The Pillar’s report on Msgr. Burrill, writing that whatever else can be said of their practice of Catholicism, The Pillar’s investigators also paid little heed to the canons of ethics for journalists.

“How did they get their story? The Society for Professional Journalists’ Code of Ethics encourages journalists to ‘avoid using undercover or other surreptitious methods of gathering information’ and admonishes that ‘pursuit of the news is not a license for ... undue intrusiveness,’” Millies wrote.

“I am not sure what the investigators at The Pillar believe,” he added. “I feel comfortably sure that before they embarked on their ‘investigation,’ they must not have thought about the Code of Canon Law, which states, ‘No one is permitted to harm illegitimately the good reputation which a person possesses nor to injure the right of any person to protect his or her own privacy.’”

Eucharist Document Should Unite, Not Divide, the Church, Panelists Advise

By Dennis Sadowski,
Catholic News Service

The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, in the middle of drafting a teaching document on the Eucharist, received words of advice from a panel convened July 28 to discuss the challenges facing the American church as it emerges from the coronavirus pandemic and seeks to overcome divisions that threaten church unity.

They heard about the importance of bishops being pastors rather than “chaplains to factions,” the need to communicate church teaching clearly and without fear, and hearing from as many voices as possible in the weeks remaining before they consider the document during their fall general assembly in November.

The 75-minute discussion left Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades of Fort Wayne-South Bend, Indiana, with ideas to share with the document’s drafters working to strengthen the foundation of the Eucharist being the source and summit of Catholic life.

Bishop Rhoades is chairman of the bishops’ Committee on Doctrine, which is charged with drafting the document.

He acknowledged the path ahead poses challenges, but it is one the doctrine committee is prepared to address.

“The goal of the document is to contribute to the eucharistic revival,” he said, recapping the USCCB strategic plan for 2021-2024 that is focused on the Eucharist being the foundation of Christian life.

“We’re striving to write a document that will contribute to a real eucharistic revival in the church in our nation by highlighting the truth about the amazing gift that Jesus gave on the night before he died, the importance of beauty and reverence in our celebration of this great mystery, and the wonderful graces that we receive in the Eucharist to grow in our Christian lives,” he explained.

While the document will include a section focused on eucharistic coherence, the church’s teaching on the reception of Communion, there is no plan to adopt a national policy to prohibit anyone from receiving the Eucharist, the bishop said.

It’s a statement Bishop Rhoades has repeated several times since the bishops’ virtual spring general assembly in June during which the bishops approved drafting the document. In the vote, 75% of the bishops said “yes,” while 25% said “no.”

During long discussions on the document before the vote, several bishops specifically pointed to President Joe Biden and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., who are Catholic, for not actively seeking to end legal abortion and called for them to be denied Communion.

Work has begun on sections of the document that pertain to church teaching while the section on eucharistic coherence will not be drafted until after a series of regional meetings among the bishops concludes by the end of August, Bishop Rhoades said.

As the drafting process continues, the USCCB’s actions related to the Eucharist are being watched around the world, said panelist Cardinal Joseph W. Tobin of Newark, New Jersey. “The Eucharist is on everyone’s mind,” he said.

Cardinal Tobin was one of the minority of prelates who voted against drafting the document at the current time. “Having the bishops on a Zoom call is not an opportunity for discernment,” he said.

He called on the bishops to take up Pope Francis’ call to synodality to discuss and hear from many voices before reaching consensus on the issues and concerns facing the church.

The pandemic has left people separated from the Eucharist and Cardinal Tobin suggested that the bishops reach out and welcome people back to the church rather than restrict participation in church life.

The debate that showcased the wide disagreements among the bishops on drafting the document should not be one that causes the bishops to fear developing a document that stresses church teaching, explained panelist Gretchen Crowe, editorial director for periodicals at Our Sunday Visitor in Indiana.

The OSV Newsweekly published an editorial supporting the vote to draft the document. Explaining the reasoning behind the editorial, Crowe said it is vital for Catholics to better know church teaching on the Real Presence in the Eucharist.

“In my mind, a fear of division or a fear of anything else really, never should prevent the church from teaching what it professes about anything, much less what it teaches about the real presence (of) Jesus Christ in the Eucharist,” Crowe said.

However, Mollie Wilson O’Reilly, editor-at-large at Commonweal magazine, expressed concern that a document on the Eucharist would bolster an apparent connection the Catholic bishops have with the Republican Party.

She questioned why some bishops have been so outspoken against Biden, the nation’s second Catholic president, when they failed to be as vocal about the transgressions of former President Donald Trump’s policies that also endangered lives.

Saying she agreed that Democratic politicians should be “pushed” for their support of abortion, Wilson O’Reilly said she believed that Catholics would flee in greater numbers because the document on the Eucharist will be perceived as political rather than genuine teaching.

Panelist John Carr, co-director of the Initiative on Catholic Social Thought and Public Life at Georgetown University, which sponsored the panel, credited Bishop Rhoades for taking on a most difficult task in a time of divisiveness among the bishops and within the church.

“It’s important to be candid about the differences here,” said Carr, who formerly was executive director of the bishops’ Department of Justice, Peace and Human Development. “How did the Eucharist, which is the sign of unity at our parish and our lives and in our church, somehow become the thing we fight about in terms of politics? It seems to me like we’ve gotten ourselves in a terrible place.”

Carr said he disagrees with the bishops’ decision to move forward on the document.

“The pastoral dimensions are really serious,” he said. “This is terrible timing and, as people have said, in the midst of a pandemic, racial reckoning, let’s have a fight about whether the president ought to be able to receive Communion. Publicly, this showcases our divisions and is a diversion.”

The program opened with a discussion between Archbishop Christophe Pierre, papal nuncio to the United States, and Kim Daniels, co-director of the Georgetown initiative. The archbishop recapped what he told the U.S. bishops during their spring general assembly in June.

The diplomat said in the discussion recorded July 27 that he had stressed that any work the conference undertakes must be rooted in synodality, as Pope Francis has invited the church to do. Synodality allows for discerning a path forward through thoughtful and respectful conversation that allows diverse voices to be heard and overcome misunderstanding, he said.

He also called on the bishops to remember that they are teachers and that the pope has invited them to teach about the sacraments “so we can receive the grace of God.” He also cautioned about the “instrumentalization” of the sacrament of the Eucharist lest it become a tool for ideologies to overtake.

“The sacraments of salvation are to be administered often to the people,” he said. “As such the church should remain united.”

Cardinal Tobin also called for synodality to be part of the bishops’ process as the document is drafted.

“What we need is a broader consultation with the American church on the mystery of the Eucharist, and not one, like or not, that is perceived as a political action,” Cardinal Tobin said. “We have a perfect invitation from the Holy Father to adopt a more synodal church, people who are talking together as we walk the same road.”

St. Vincent de Paul School in Wheeling Announces Renovations and New Teachers

By Colleen Rowan

WHEELING—It has been a busy summer at St. Vincent de Paul Parish School in Wheeling. Renovations have been conducted and new teachers and staff have joined the SVS family.

"This is our third year of continued updates and renovations," school officials posted on St. Vincent's Facebook page. "We want to thank everyone that is involved!"

The school announced that a new fire alarm system and LED exit signs are currently being installed with the help of Yahn Electric. The classrooms will also start to have the lighting fixtures replaced.

Panhandle Cleaning and Restoration, school officials said, have been waxing the floors and cleaning the school.

"We will also have new carpet for the hallway!" officials said. "The gym roof is being repaired and looks better than ever! Even the parking lots have been resurfaced! We give a big thank you to our head of Maintenance, Jim Timberlake, for keeping all our new updates scheduled and on track!"

The school also announced its new teachers. Gino Dimitri is the new technology instructor, who has a Bachelor of Arts degree in elementary education from West Liberty University.

He chose to teach at St. Vincent because he is a proud alumnus of SVS and "I want to give our students a chance to have the same positive experience that I had," he said.

"My biggest goal for the 2021-22 school year is to create a technology program that is fun and exciting learning experience for all our SVS students," he said.

Also joining the SVS family this year is McKenzie Aileen Smith as the preschool age 4 teacher. She has education and human services specialties in early intervention, family and youth, infant and toddler from West Virginia University. She is an alumna of St. Vincent's who attended the school from 3-year-old preschool through graduation from eighth grade.

"So, I have a connection and love for the school," she said. "Working there will just add to the joy and memories!"

"My biggest goal for the 2021-22 school year is to create a positive learning environment for the students and myself," she said.

Whitney Kibler is the school's new cafeteria manager. She has a Bachelor of Arts degree from West Liberty University. In her new role, Kibler wants to give SVS students healthy, nutritious, homemade lunches with a few desserts here and there.

"My biggest goal for the 2021-22 school year is to have the kids want to order and eat the school lunch! And have them talking about how good it was," she said. "I have lots of plans for the lunch program such as theme days and asking each grade level to choose the menu of the day."

Kibler's son Emerson is a student at the school. She feels St. Vincent's is the perfect fit for him.

"We chose to send Emerson to St. Vincent because we're Catholic and the school meets his educational needs," she said. "The small class sizes are perfect. I also miss the feeling of community and being part of something bigger than myself to help future generations thrive."

Madonna High School's AP Students Score Academic Achievement

WEIRTON—Madonna High School in Weirton congratulated its 18 AP (Advanced Placement) Microeconomics students and their teacher, Mary Kohelis, on their recent academic achievement.

"We have to give a huge shout out to Mrs. Kohelis and her AP Microeconomics class," MHS officials posted on the school's Facebook page. "Eighteen students took the AP test, and all 18 received a passing grade of 3 or higher!"

Many U.S. colleges grant credit and/or advanced placement for scores of 3 and above on the test.

"That means they let you skip the equivalent course once you get to college," school officials said in the post.

"Congratulations to Mrs. Kohelis and students!" MHS officials said.

Ss. Peter and Paul School in Oak Hill will Have an Open House Aug. 12

OAK HILL—School begins in three weeks on Monday, Aug. 16, at Ss. Peter and Paul School in Oak Hill. To prepare, the school will have an open house/orientation Thursday, Aug. 12 at 7 p.m.

"We have just a few openings left for PK and kindergarten," school officials said.

For any questions, contact the school via Facebook messenger or call the school Monday through Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Weirton's St. Paul School Welcomes New Second-Grade Teacher

WEIRTON—St. Paul School in Weirton welcomed Emily Ruiz as the new second-grade teacher.

She is a longtime Weirton resident and an alumna of Weir High School (2016). In 2020, Ruiz graduated with a Bachelor's Degree and the following year graduated Magna Cum Laude with her Master's Degree in elementary education, both from West Virginia University. She is a member of the Autism Speaks Organization through WVU and the international honor society Kappa Delta Pi.

The rigorous "five-year teacher education program" that Ruiz went through was designed to provide her with an extensive amount of hands on experience. Because of this, she has over 1,000 student teaching hours based in first-, third-, and fourth-grade classrooms at Bruceton School in Bruceton Mills near Morgantown. She has also spent time in kindergarten, second-, and sixth- through eighth-grade classrooms. During the pandemic she completed her Master's Degree while also teaching fourth grade at Bruceton School.

Week Raises Awareness of Natural Family Planning and How it Enriches Sacrament of Marriage

By Jodi Marlin Catholic News Service

"To have ... To hold ... To honor: Supporting God's gifts of love and life in marriage" is the theme of Natural Family Planning Awareness Week July 25-31.

The educational campaign of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops celebrates God's vision for marriage and promotes the methods of natural family planning through a social media presence at #NFPWeek and through NFP events scheduled in dioceses across the country.

The start of NFP week coincides with two other July 25 observances that underscore and celebrate the value and dignity of all human life: the anniversary of St. Paul VI's 1968 encyclical "Humanae Vitae," articulating the church's beliefs about human sexuality, marriage, conjugal love and responsible parenthood, and World Day for Grandparents and the Elderly, instituted by Pope Francis earlier this year.

The development of NFP provider organizations is up sharply in recent years. NFP research continues to make relevant strides as well, according to Theresa Notare, assistant director of natural family planning in the Secretariat of Laity, Marriage, Family Life and Youth at the USCCB.

"But if you look at it from the perspective of user rates in the U.S., it looks like a failure," she told Catholic News Service.

The Centers for Disease Control's National Survey of Family Growth says less than 1% of Americans of reproductive age are currently using some type of natural method.

Although the rate is a little higher within the Catholic Church — usually among those who not only fulfill their Sunday Mass obligation but often attend weekday Masses as well, Notare noted — "there are layers of knowledge and acceptance."

"I would think that among progressive people who are interested in protecting the environment, doing something healthy for their body and employing a holistic approach to living, that natural family planning would be well known, understood and beloved," she said.

"But it's not," she added. "Actually, there are probably higher user rates of any natural method in countries that are not as well developed, where they're focused on family, less in love with technology and not as immersed in the 'me' culture and 'what I want.'"

Many Catholic couples aren't necessarily rejecting the idea of natural family planning, Notare suggested, they simply haven't given it much thought because what's put in front of them at every turn are the culturally accepted alternatives.

According to the Catechism of the Catholic Church, natural family planning is a general title for the ethical, natural, safe and effective methods for achieving or avoiding pregnancy in marriage.

Couples are taught how to observe and interpret their signs of fertility and infertility in a way that respects the bodies of the spouses, encourages tenderness between them and favors "the education of an authentic freedom."

The sacred responsibility of being open to the possibility of children is intrinsic to the purpose of marriage and the complementarity of the man and woman who come together in the sacrament. This discernment, achieved through prayer and communication between the husband and wife about when and how many children the couple can nurture and support, is crucial to that call.

The Catholic Church supports the postponement or avoidance of pregnancy if the methods used to achieve it do not interfere with God's gift of fertility.

By honoring God's plan for marriage and preserving the dignity of both spouses, as well as the life that would be created, NFP bestows the grace of a deeper bond between the spouses and enriches family life. Couples learn how to create a "happy tension," as Notare put it, between what they discern God wants for their lives, what they want and how many children they feel they can support.

In the U.S., the main methods of natural family planning fall into one of three categories: cervical mucus methods, sympto-hormonal methods and symptom-thermal methods. All three rely on daily observation, testing and recording (charting) to determine the couple's most fertile time each month and therefore the period during which conception is most likely.

Cervical mucus methods hinge on a primary sign of the woman's fertility, the characteristics of her cervical mucus, which is observed and charted daily.

Sympto-hormonal methods — sometimes referred to as the Marquette method — tracks several daily indicators of a woman's fertility, including her levels of reproductive hormones. Symptom-thermal methods use at least two indicators of fertility, including the characteristics of cervical mucus and basal body temperature.

Lisa Everett, director of Marriage and Family Ministry for the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, Indiana, perceives that the number of Catholics couples using NFP is growing. Partly responsible, she believes, is the recent awareness and embrace among the general population of the gamut of fertility awareness-based methods of family planning, referred to as FABMs.

"While FABMS don't have the same moral rules surround them, the fact is that this has become a much more popular option," said Everett. "It means that there's more acceptance and awareness of all things natural in our society."

FABMs include barrier methods of pregnancy prevention, though, so care must be taken regarding blanket support of them, warned Notare. A cornerstone of NFP, on the other hand, is abstinence from sexual relations during fertile days in a woman's cycle for couples trying to avoid pregnancy.

The initial reaction Deanna Johnston sometimes gets from engaged couples who are presented with information about natural family planning is a sentiment she understands all too well. The director of NFP and of the Office of Family Life for the Diocese of Tyler, Texas, readily acknowledges that NFP can sometimes be a cross.

"Abstinence is hard," she affirmed. Still, she considers NFP to be a "gift of the Holy Spirit."

A mother of four and NFP user herself, Johnston and her husband believe that first and foremost, a marriage should remain open to new life. But when it makes sense to postpone pregnancy, "there is a tool that Catholics can use in good conscience to do that."

"What I see with couples is that sometimes they say, 'We're hesitant to begin, we're nervous, we're not actually sure this is going to work, but we just feel strongly that we need to try something different.'"

The modern, app-based lifestyle dovetails with NFP programs' requirements, facilitating couples' tracking and recording of data. That ease of access encourages Everett. "I think those two factors have made NFP more attractive to couples than it otherwise might have been."

The FEMM app and Catholic digital fertility tracking programs are also helping to combat what Notare calls "fertility illiteracy."

Indeed, the growth in the number, size and tenacity of NFP ministries, providers and other organizations has been "fabulous" in the last 20 years, Notare told CNS.

She hopes it will eventually combat one of the biggest challenges she sees to wider utilization of natural family planning methods: the general lack of awareness that they exist and that they constitute the church's teaching regarding family planning as it enriches the sacrament of marriage.

NFP providers are doing their part, said Notare, teaching in parishes about the human person as God created him or her, the nature of human sexuality, the complementarity of men and women, the gift of human fertility, the sacredness of marriage, the morality and immorality of certain technological means of contraception and reproductive fertility, chastity and the theology of the body.

"They're involved in all of these things," she said. "They're a small but mighty force" that are usually limited by a single factor: funding.

"The bishops understand NFP teachings and support them. The difficulty comes in regard to finances. When a bishop is able to put money behind an NFP ministry, it flourishes. With a dedicated staff person, the progress is visible."

CATHOLIC CHARITIES WEST VIRGINIA MISSION MOMENT

Successful Renters Program

By Katie Hinerman Klug, CCWVa Marketing Communications Specialist

Helping our clients find safe and stable housing is an important part of our work at Catholic Charities West Virginia. This includes assisting our neighbors in understanding their rights as tenants and advocating for themselves.

The Eastern Panhandle Successful Renters Program was created to educate and equip tenants with the information and tools they need to rent successfully and achieve living experiences that are stable and satisfying for themselves and their families.

"There is no standard lease in West Virginia," said Kat Hagedorn, CCWVa Case Manager. "But there are rights and responsibilities that renters have by law, and it's important for people to understand this."

The Successful Renters Program was created by representatives from a collaboration of private businesses and community organizations, including Catholic Charities West Virginia (CCWVa), and is provided by the Eastern Panhandle Health and Human Services Housing Work Group. Catholic Charities staff helps deliver the program.

In the Successful Renters Program, participants learn the basics of landlord/tenant right and responsibilities. They review a sample lease, learn how to lodge a complaint, and discuss the importance of record keeping.

"It's so important for people to read the entire lease before signing," said Hagedorn. "That's one of the biggest takeaways from this course."

One section of the program is devoted entirely to budgeting, reaching financial goals and understanding credit.

"The exercise of creating a monthly budget has been especially beneficial for our families who are struggling to make ends meet," said Hagedorn.

Other issues such as renter's insurance, fair housing and security deposits are also discussed.

"The Successful Renters Program empowers tenants with the knowledge and skills they need to secure and maintain safe housing for their families," said Hagedorn.

EASTERN PANHANDLE SUCCESSFUL RENTERS PROGRAM

How to Lodge a Written Complaint

- 1. Cite specific items in the lease agreement. Before writing your complaint letter, it is a good idea to read over your lease agreement and see how your contract applies to the issue in question. A legitimate complaint is anything that regards violation of lease terms, local ordinances, etc.
- 2. Craft a letter that makes sense. Landlords often get letters from tenants that include errors, not only in spelling and grammar, but in sentence structure and logic. Read through your draft to make sure what you are saying makes sense, as it would if you said it out loud.
- 3. Choose a good, professional tone. A tenant is a position with legal rights and obligations, and a legal relationship with other parties. It is critically important to present yourself as a competent individual who is to be taken seriously.
- 4. Make specific requests. Make it clear how you want the situation to be handled in accordance with your rights as a tenant. Ask for the repairs to be made within a specified amount of time.
- 5. Cite applicable laws. Local, state and federal laws may apply to your particular grievance. Make sure these are referenced in your letter. Do not threaten litigation unless you have an attorney in mind and understand the costs for which you may be ultimately responsible. Include for a timely response from your landlord according to local law. Mandatory response time may vary by jurisdiction.

Obituary

Sister Mona Farthing, CSJ

Sister Mona Farthing, a Sister of St. Joseph for nearly 66 years, died peacefully at Mount St. Joseph on July 23, 2021. She was preceded in death by her father Charles, her mother, Mildred, and her sister Barbara Hauber. She is survived by her beloved niece, Jessica Barret Grogg and her husband Shawn, her great-nephews, Devon and Adam, and her brother-in-law, Steve Hauber who live in Parkersburg.

While in the nursing program at St. Francis Hospital in Charleston, Sister Mona received the gift of faith and was baptized into the Catholic Church. Responding to the support and example of the Sisters of St. Joseph serving at the hospital, she requested admission to the Congregation and entered on September 8, 1955.

After receiving her nursing degrees from The Catholic University of America, Sister Mona served throughout West Virginia in all levels of nursing practice at St. Francis Hospital in Charleston, Wheeling Hospital, United Hospital Center in Clarksburg and The Louis A. Johnson Veterans Medical Center in Clarksburg. In addition, her teaching career in nursing spanned 23 years at West Virginia Wesleyan College in Buckhannon and at Wheeling University. Her students remember her for the unique way in which she included practical suggestions along with nursing theory.

After retiring from Wheeling University Department of Nursing in 1999, Sister Mona continued to provide service to the sick as a part-time chaplain in the Pastoral Care Department of Wheeling Hospital. She also served her Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph as a member of the formation team and in congregational leadership.

Due to the current pandemic, Sister Mona's funeral liturgy will be celebrated at a later date when all can more safely gather.

Hay que valorar a los ancianos, no descartarlos, dice el papa

Por Carol Glatz, Catholic News Service

CIUDAD DEL VATICANO (CNS) -- Personas mayores no son "sobras de la vida" para desechar; más bien, continúan siendo un alimento precioso para las familias, los jóvenes y las comunidades, dijo el papa Francisco en la homilía que escribió para la Misa con motivo de la primera Jornada Mundial de los Abuelos y Ancianos.

"Pregúntemonos: ¿He visitado a los abuelos? ¿a los mayores de la familia o de mi barrio? ¿Los he escuchado? ¿Les he dedicado un poco de tiempo?" dijo el papa en su homilía que se leyó en voz alta durante una Misa oficiada por el arzobispo Rino Fisichella.

"Custodiémoslos, para que no se pierda nada. Nada de su vida ni de sus sueños. Depende de nosotros, hoy, que no nos arrepintamos mañana de no haberles dedicado suficiente atención a quienes nos amaron y nos dieron la vida", dijo la homilía.

La Misa del 25 de julio se celebró en la Basílica de San Pedro con la asistencia de unas 2,000 personas, incluidas familias multigeneracionales, personas mayores y sus cuidadores. También estaban disponibles folletos de la Misa en letra grande.

El papa Francisco, que se sometió a una cirugía de colon el 4 de julio, no presidió la Misa porque todavía estaba en "convalecencia normal", según la oficina de prensa del Vaticano.

Sin embargo, el papa pronunció su discurso del Ángelus y dirigió la oración al mediodía del mismo día.

El arzobispo Fisichella, presidente del Pontificio Consejo para la Promoción de la Nueva Evangelización, presidió la Misa, comenzó saludando a las personas mayores presentes quienes, según dijo, esperaban celebrar con el papa Francisco.

Pero "no queremos que se canse para que pueda pasar estos días descansando para reponer sus fuerzas y retomar plenamente su ministerio pastoral", dijo el arzobispo antes de leer la homilía que preparó el papa para la Misa.

"Los abuelos y los mayores no son sobras de la vida, desechos que se deben tirar", escribió el papa. Son una preciosa fuente de alimento", escribió el papa.

"Ellos nos han custodiado a lo largo de las etapas de nuestro crecimiento, ahora nos toca a nosotros custodiar su vida, aligerar sus dificultades, estar atentos a sus necesidades, crear las condiciones para que se les faciliten sus tareas diarias y no se sientan solos", escribió.

El papa pidió a las personas que se reconectaran con las personas mayores, que las visitaran o llamaran y "aprendamos a compartir el tiempo con ellos. Saldremos mejores", tanto jóvenes como mayores, escribió.

"Sufro cuando veo una sociedad que corre, atareada, indiferente, afanada en tantas cosas e incapaz de detenerse para dirigir una mirada, un saludo, una caricia", escribió.

La idea de que "cada uno se ocupe de sí mismo mata", escribió, y el Evangelio pide a las personas que compartan "lo que somos y lo que tenemos" para encontrar una realización verdadera y duradera.

"Los abuelos, que han alimentado nuestra vida, hoy tienen hambre de nosotros, de nuestra atención, de nuestra ternura, de sentirnos cerca. Alcemos la mirada hacia ellos, como Jesús hace con nosotros", escribió el papa.

Durante las intercesiones, se ofrecieron oraciones por los que murieron durante la pandemia, especialmente los ancianos, y para que los fieles aprendieran a cuidar y servir a los ancianos.

Al final de la Misa, el arzobispo Fisichella y el cardenal Kevin J. Farrell, prefecto del Dicasterio para los Laicos, la Familia y la Vida, que promovía la jornada mundial, bendijeron canastas con flores de color amarillo vivo, rojo y naranja, y con el mensaje del papa, que luego fueron distribuidas por los jóvenes a las personas mayores en la Misa.

El papa apareció en la ventana de su estudio en el palacio apostólico para saludar y bendecir a las personas reunidas en la Plaza de San Pedro y pronunciar su discurso antes de rezar el Ángelus.

Invitó a todos a visitar a los ancianos y entregarles una copia de la jornada mundial de este año. Jóvenes y mayores deben pasar tiempo juntos, hablando y compartiendo sus recuerdos, esperanzas y sueños, dijo.

Al comentar sobre la lectura evangélica del día de la multiplicación de los panes, el papa recordó el generoso regalo del muchacho que dio lo poco que tenía, que fue suficiente para Jesús, que utilizó ese pequeño regalo para alimentar a miles.

Pero el papa le dijo a la multitud que pensarán en el evento desde el punto de vista del muchacho: tomar sus cinco panes de cebada y dos pescados para alimentar a otros parece una "propuesta sin sentido, es más, injusta. ¿Por qué privar a una persona, sobre todo a un muchacho, de lo que ha traído de casa y tiene derecho a quedárselo para sí? ¿Por qué quitarle a uno lo que en cualquier caso no es suficiente para saciar a todos?"

Muestra que las personas deben preguntar qué pueden llevar a Jesús cada día y les recuerda que hace milagros de lo pequeño, "a Dios le encanta actuar así: hace grandes cosas a partir de las pequeñas, de las gratuitas", dijo el papa.

La mentalidad de hoy está marcada por la búsqueda de "acumular y aumentar lo que tenemos; Jesús, en cambio, pide dar, disminuir. Nos encanta añadir, nos gustan las adiciones; a Jesús le gustan las sustracciones, quitar algo para dárselo a los demás", dijo.

El papa recordó que muchos problemas en el mundo, en particular el hambre, no se pueden resolver sin una "justa distribución". Se estima que alrededor de 7,000 niños menores de cinco años mueren cada día debido a desnutrición, añadió.

Ante tales escándalos, dijo, la gente debería, como el muchacho, aceptar la invitación de Jesús y "da lo poco que tienes, tus talentos y tus bienes, ponlos a disposición de Jesús y de los hermanos. No temas, nada se perderá, porque, si compartes, Dios multiplica".
