It is with great sadness that I once again call on all West Virginia residents to join with the world in prayer for the victims of the horrendous school shooting that took place yesterday in Uvalde, Texas.

As Catholics, we are called to pray for those who have died and assist in healing the deep wounds of those who mourn. But we must now do more than offer prayers and support. We must encourage concrete action in the hopes that never again are school children the target of these heinous acts of violence.

It is obvious that mental health issues, unchecked anger, and rage are part of the problem and can lead to people committing unspeakable acts of evil and violence, and we must address these issues, but it is equally apparent that those perpetrating these terrible atrocities are able to do so because they wield powerful weapons that are able to kill and maim dozens of people in just seconds. We must do more as a society to limit the availability of these types of weapons; especially to those whose sole purpose is to use such weapons to commit atrocities against our brothers and sisters.

I call on everyone to pray for an end to this evil and implore both gun owners and our elected officials to work together and take action to ensure the safety of our children, our schools, our churches, and our communities.

Pope Prays for Texas Shooting Victims, Calls for Stricter Gun Laws

By Cindy Wooden, Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Saying his heart was broken at the news of at least 19 children and 2 adults being shot and killed at a Texas elementary school, Pope Francis said it was time to say “Enough!” and enact stricter laws on gun sales.

At the end of his weekly general audience May 25, with thousands of people gathered in St. Peter’s Square, the pope prayed publicly for the victims of the shooting the day before at Robb Elementary School in Uvalde, Texas.

“We sacralize death’s instrument to obtain than aspirin,” he said. “I’m sick of hearing it.”

By Rhina Guidos, Catholic News Service

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Several U.S. bishops spoke out against the easy accessibility to guns in the country following a May 24 rampage that left at least 19 children and two of their elementary school teachers dead in Uvalde, Texas.

“Don’t tell me that guns aren’t the problem, people are. I’m sick of hearing it,” Bishop Daniel E. Flores of Brownsville, Texas, tweeted May 25. “The darkness first takes our children who then kill our children, using the guns that are easier to obtain than aspirin. We sacralize death’s instruments and then are surprised that death uses them.”

The comments came hours after Texas authorities said an 18-year-old with two assault weapons evaded police after crashing his truck near an elementary school close to the U.S-Mexico border and entered the school building at around noon armed with what seemed to be a rifle.

“There was several law enforcement that engaged the suspect but he was able to make entry into the school where he did go into several classrooms and, unfortunately, he did fire his firearm,” Sgt. Erick Estrada, of the Texas Department of Public Safety, told CNN late May 24.

A Border Patrol unit sub-sequently arrived and one of its officers shot and killed the shooter in the classroom full of fourth graders.

In addition to the dead, reports say 15 children were injured as well as the two law enforcement officers who initially attempted to stop him. Authorities named Salvador Ramos as the shooter and said that prior to arriving at the school, he shot his grandmother, who remains in the hospital.

San Antonio Archbishop Gustavo García-Siller comforted families outside a local civic center in Uvalde as they waited for news.

Along with priests from the Archdiocese of San Antonio, he spent much of the day tending to parishioners and others who needed comfort after the horrific day.

When will these insane acts of violence end?” the archbishop later said in a statement. “It is too great a burden to bear. The word tragedy doesn’t begin to describe what occurred. These massacres cannot be considered ‘the new normal.’”

“The Catholic Church consistently calls for the protection of all life; and these mass shootings are a most pressing life issue on which all in society must act — elected leaders and citizens alike,” he said. “We pray that God comfort and offer compassion to the families of these little ones whose pain is unbearable.”

He confirmed to a CNN reporter that there’s an effort to connect with Ramos’ family and said he would show them gestures of “tenderness, compassion because they are suffering, too.” He said Ramos’ actions were evil but said he didn’t agree when he heard someone say “that man is evil.”

“No, they were evil actions. Everyone has dignity and the family is suffering, too,” he said. “It’s easy to make remarks that destroy people’s lives ... there’s already enough destruction.”

From Rome, Pope Francis also weighed in, saying: “It’s time to say ‘Enough’ to the indiscriminate trafficking of guns,” the pope said. “Let’s all work to ensure that such tragedies never happen again.”

Shortly before the audience, Archbishop Gustavo García-Siller of San Antonio, an archdiocese that includes Uvalde, tweeted: “Holy Father Pope Francis, say some prayers for the souls of our little ones killed today and two teachers. Uvalde is in mourning. The families are having a very dark time. Your prayer will do good to them.”

Local authorities said the children and adults were killed by an 18-year-old student from a high school nearby. He also was reported dead and at least three children remained hospitalized for injuries suffered in the attack.

Bishops Push Gun Control; Some Call Mass Shootings ‘Pressing Life Issue’

Washington Cardinal Wilton D. Gregory, chairman of the U.S. bishops’ ad hoc committee on gun violence, said the right to have weapons doesn’t occur again.

Amendment did not come down from Sinai.”

“The right to bear arms will never be more important than human life,” he said. “Our children have rights too. And our elected officials have a moral duty to protect them.”

In an address to the nation, President Joe Biden recalled his time as vice president when he could not get enough members of Congress to agree on gun control legislation in 2013, a year after 26 people, including 20 elementary school children, were fatally shot by a gunman at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Connecticut. “As a nation, we have to ask: When in God’s name are we going to stand up to the gun lobby? When in God’s name will we do what we all know in our gut needs to be done?” the president said.

Cardinal Cupich, in his tweets, implored people, not just to lament, but to act.

“We must weep and soak in the grief that comes with the knowledge that these children of God were cut down by a man who was just a few years their senior. But then we must steel ourselves to act in the face of what seems like insurmountable despair,” he tweeted. “As I reflect on this latest American massacre, I keep returning to the questions: Who are we as a nation if we do not act to protect our children? What do we love more: our instruments of death or our future?”

The USCCB has consistently called for gun control.

In a presentation titled “Responses to the Plague of Gun Violence” he delivered Nov. 11, 2019, during the U.S. bishops’ fall general assembly, Bishop Frank J. Dewane of Venice, Florida, then chairman of the Committee on Domestic Justice and Human Development, spelled out the bishops’ support for a ban on assault weapons, universal background checks, a federal gun trafficking bill, regulations on sales of handguns, improved mental health interventions, safety measures and “an honest assessment of violent images and experiences in our society.”

Like much of the American public voicing frustrations after the mass shooting in Texas, Bishop Mark E. Brennan of Wheeling-Charleston, West Virginia, said the country “must now do more than offer prayers and support.”

He called on all, but particularly on lawmakers and gun owners “to work together and take action to ensure the safety of our children, our schools, our churches and our communities.”

A few months ago, the Creation Care Team at Blessed Sacrament Church in South Charleston decided to focus their educational efforts around the issue of water. They began with a series of bulletin articles on the themes of: Water in Liturgy, Water in Laudato Si, the streams and rivers with which West Virginia is blessed, and an overview of water quality issues in our state.

A kayak/canoe clean-up trip to a “resurrected river” in the area, (i.e. one that a volunteer group had brought back from a severely degraded condition) and “Blessing of the Fleet” was planned as a culminating event. The team placed a sign-up sheet for the blessing/paddle/clean-up in the church’s gathering space surrounded by a display of pictures and information centered around the themes of the bulletin articles.

In 2000, the Coal River was identified by the National Association of Rivers as the dirtiest stream in West Virginia; particularly with respect to e. coli levels, as well as debris from years of neglect and abuse. The e. coli problem was due in large part to the approximately 1,500 homes along the river with malfunctioning septic systems. Around 2004, a group of friends who regularly frequented a bar/restaurant overlooking the river decided to do something about it. Their efforts and concerns eventually resulted in the founding of the non-profit “Coal River Group.”

Bill Currey, who was a founding member of that group, currently serves as its “chair emeritus”. He is also chairperson of the new West Virginia Flatwater Trail Commission. Today the Coal River Group has hundreds of volunteers who regularly work to clean the river of debris, as well as speak out about issues that affect the health of this beautiful river.

On May 14, despite threats of rain, an intrepid group from Blessed Sacrament (20 paddlers, five shuttle drivers, and a number of other parishioners), gathered at the Coal River Group headquarters. There, Bill Currey explained the details of his Group’s efforts to resurrect the river. The group then munched their brown bag lunches on a patio overlooking a falls on the river. At the paddle put-in, Blessed Sacrament’s pastor Father John Finnell blessed the fleet of kayaks and canoes, paddlers were given trash bags, and the flotilla was launched down the river.

Seven miles and a few hours later, they returned—with kayaks and trash bags brimming with various trash picked up in the river, including an old helium tank, beach ball, baby crib mobile, milk carton containers, backpack, and a few canoes’ worth of bottles, cups, containers, etc.

All participants made it back safely and, as the last kayaks were being loaded onto cars, the skies opened and the rains came.
Online Apologetics Seminar Explores Evidence of God’s Existence

Join Catholic Distance University from June 13 through July 4 for an online seminar: Proclaiming the Reality of God: Compelling Evidence of God’s Existence. The seminar, which awards one continuing education unit (CEU), is free for Catholic school teachers and those serving in church ministry and religious education in the Diocese of Wheeling-Charleston.

Have you ever needed to answer the question, “Does God exist?” Given our increasingly secular society and the atheistic worldview often promoted by the mainstream media and academic/scientific establishment, the need to equip Catholics to credibly,convincingly, and compellingly explain and share why we believe in God has never been greater. Taught by Professor Steven Hemler, president of the Catholic Apologetics Institute of North America, this online apologetics seminar presents compelling scientific evidence, philosophical reasons, and insights drawn from human nature demonstrating God’s existence. This seminar will help us better perform the spiritual works of mercy to “counsel the doubtful” and “educate the uninformed. Enroll today! San Francisco Prelate Says No Communion for Pelosi over Her Abortion Stand

By Julie Asher, Catholic News Service

WASHINGTON (CNS) — San Francisco’s archbishop declared May 20 that House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., is not “to be admitted” to Communion unless and until she publicly repudiates “support for abortion ‘rights’” and goes to confession and receives absolution “for her cooperation in this evil.”

Archbishop Salvatore J. Cordileone said he decided to make this declaration “after numerous attempts to speak with her to help her understand the grave evil she is perpetrating, the scandal she is causing and the danger to her own soul she is risking” as a Catholic who supports legalized abortion.

Pelosi represents California’s 12th Congressional District, which is entirely within San Francisco. A call to Pelosi’s Washington office from Catholic News Service to request a comment was not returned immediately.

“Please know that I find no pleasure whatsoever in fulfilling my pastoral duty here,” Archbishop Cordileone said. “Speaker Pelosi remains our sister in Christ. Her advocacy for the care of the poor and vulnerable elicits my admiration. I assure you that my action here is purely pastoral, not political. I have been very clear in my words and actions about this.”

The archbishop opened his 1,300-word letter by saying that Pope Francis “has been one of the world’s most vocal advocates of human dignity in every stage and condition of life.”

“He decries what he evocatively calls the ‘throwaway culture,’” Archbishop Cordileone said. “There can be no more extreme example of this cultural depravity than when direct attacks on human life are enshrined in a nation’s law, celebrated by society, and even paid for by the government.”

“This is why Pope Francis, as much as any pope in living memory, has repeatedly and vividly affirmed the church’s clear and constant teaching that abortion is a grave moral evil,” he said.

Last October, Pelosi met privately with Pope Francis at the Vatican while she was in Rome to speak at a meeting of legislators from around the world in preparation for the U.N. climate summit. The Vatican released photos of the meeting but provided no details of the encounter. A photo of the pope and Pelosi from that visit is on the homepage of her congressional website.

Pelosi said in a statement it was “a spiritual, personal and official honor” to have an audience with the pope.

“His Holiness’ leadership is a source of soul and hope for Catholics and for all people, challenging each of us to be good stewards of God’s creation, to act on climate, to embrace the refugee, the immigrant and the poor and to recognize the dignity and divinity in everyone,” her statement said.

Archbishop Cordileone said he is bound by canon law to be “concerned for all the Christian faithful entrusted” to his care.

He added that over the years he has heard from many Catholics “expressing distress over the scandal being caused by such Catholics in public life who promote such grievously evil practices as abortion.”

In September, Archbishop Cordileone asked Catholics in the archdiocese to pray for Pelosi on abortion. What prompted the call for prayer was her leadership on the Women’s Health Protection Act, or H.R. 3755, passed by the House in a 218-211 vote Sept. 24.

The measure establishes the legal right to abortion on demand at any stage of pregnancy in all 50 states under federal law. The bill was pushed forward over fears by abortion supporters the Supreme Court will overturn Roe v. Wade in its decision on a Mississippi ban on abortion after 15 weeks. The measure failed to advance to a full vote in the Senate May 11.

Pelosi considers abortion health care and, as recently as May 13 in remarks on the steps of the U.S. Capitol, she warned the Supreme Court to keep its “hands off women’s reproductive health care.” She also said if Roe is overturned, Republicans have a “dangerous and extreme agenda” that could see “an all-out assault” on more rights.

Pelosi’s position on abortion “has become only more extreme over the years, especially in the last few months,” Archbishop Cordileone said. “Just earlier this month she once again, as she has many times before, explicitly cited her Catholic faith while justifying abortion as a ‘choice’; this time setting herself in direct opposition to Pope Francis.”

“Conversion is always better than exclusion, and before any such action can be taken it must be preceded by sincere and diligent efforts at dialogue and persuasion,” Archbishop Cordileone wrote.

“If the person in question still presents himself or herself to receive the Eucharist, ‘the minister of Holy Communion must refuse to distribute it,’” he said, quoting canon law. “Board the papal flight from Slovakia Sept. 15, Pope Francis said he did not want to comment directly on the issue of denying Communion in the United States ‘because I do not know the details; I am speaking of the principle’ of the matter.

However, he said that while there is no question that ‘abortion is homicide,’ bishops must take a pastoral approach rather than wade into the political sphere.

“If we look at the history of the church, we can see that every time the bishops did not act like shepherds when dealing with a problem, they aligned themselves with political life, on political problems,” he said.

He also said he never denied Communion to anyone, but he “never aware of anyone in front of me under those conditions that you mentioned.”

Recalling his apostolic exhortation, “Evangelii Gaudium,” the pope said that “Communion is not a prize for the perfect,” but rather “a gift, the presence of Jesus in his church and in the community. That is the theology.”

However, Pope Francis also said he understood why the church takes a hard stance because accepting abortion “is a bit as if daily murder was accepted.”

New Master of Science of Athletic Training Program Launched at Wheeling University

WHEELING—Wheeling University has launched a new Master of Science of Athletic Training (MSAT) program, which allows students to complete their degree in just 18 months. The only Master’s in Athletic Training program offered in the Ohio Valley, the curriculum will offer students a problem-based format that encourages a hands-on, team-based approach to learning.

University President Ginny R. Favede believes Wheeling will produce well-educated Athletic Trainers who will help address a national shortage in the field. Athletic Training, she said, is a fast-growing career field with many opportunities.

“With health care ever changing, there is a high demand for Athletic Trainers to serve in a variety of settings outside the traditional sports team related job,” said Favede. “More and more qualified athletic trainers are needed to serve patients of all ages, across many fitness and health related settings. Today, athletic trainers can be found in doctor’s offices, hospital emergency rooms, sports medicine clinics, and occupational and industrial settings.”

Dr. Melissa Bozovich, DPT, ATC, director of the MSAT program and assistant professor of Athletic Training, said the demand for athletic trainers is on the rise. She believes Wheeling’s 18-month format and the problem-based learning curriculum is what sets it apart from many others.

“Three aspects of Wheeling’s MSAT program make it unique. First, the program offers undergraduates a 3+2 format, which allows the students to complete their undergraduate degree in three years and finish the master’s degree in an additional 18 months,” Bozovich explained. “Secondly, is the Problem Based Learning (PBL) format, which is an integrated approach where learning is student-centered with objectives driven by real-life scenarios. Lastly, Clinical Education is woven throughout the curriculum, so students are able to gain practical experience using skills they are learning in the classroom.”

Additionally, Bozovich said the PBL curriculum teaches students to work in small groups focused on active learning, discussion and collaboration. “This approach to learning develops the student’s critical thinking, clinical judgment and self-appraisal skills – skills that will make them work-place ready upon graduation.”

Favede said Wheeling’s widely popular undergraduate Exercise Science program allows students in that major to make an easy transition into the master’s program. “The MSAT program offers our undergraduate students a seamless transition and the ability to complete their degrees in just five years. In addition, Wheeling alumni will be given a 25 percent discount when they enroll.”

Historically, Wheeling University, like many other institutions, offered a bachelor’s level Athletic Training program in the past, which was sufficient for licensure and beginning a career.

However, as of fall 2022, students looking to earn a degree in Athletic Training will need to obtain a graduate-level degree. Key stakeholders in Athletic Training agreed that all these programs had to transition to a professional level master’s degree in accordance with guidelines adopted by the National Athletic Trainers’ Association (NATA) and the Commission on Accreditation of Athletic Trainers Education (CAATE).

Bozovich added, “NATA and CAATE spent two years examining what is the appropriate degree level to best prepare athletic trainers for their role in today’s evolving health care system. After careful study, these two organizations decided a master’s level education would provide Athletic Trainers with the best resources to serve the patients entrusted in their care. With Athletic Trainers becoming more and more integral members of interprofessional patient care, the advanced degree was the appropriate next step in their professional development.”

“Athletic Training is recognized by the American Medical Association (AMA), Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) and the Department of Health and Human Services (HHIS) as an allied health care profession. Overall, this program is intended to provide improved access to health care and additional healthcare providers in the Appalachian communities that are lacking important medical resources,” Favede said.

Wheeling’s MSAT program is just one of five offered in the state of West Virginia. To learn more about the MSAT program, interested students can contact Bozovich at mbozovich@wheeling.edu.
‘The Options Wouldn’t Have Been Available to Me Anywhere Else’
– Chrystal’s Story

Chrystal has been working with the Catholic Charities West Virginia (CCWVa) Adult Education program for a few months to get back on her feet. Chrystal came to us as a condition of her bond after getting out of jail for a drug-related offense.

“At first I had to be here,” Chrystal said. “Now I see I needed to be here to get sober. ‘Cause I couldn’t do it by myself. I’ve tried.”

With two grown kids and seven beautiful grandkids, Chrystal is ready to start fresh. Once she finishes her certificate program she plans to go to Beckley, where her sister-in-law lives. While she imagined she’d get a low-paying job as a housekeeper for a hotel, her work with CCWVa staff and volunteers has allowed her to see more compelling possibilities. She could use her certificate to get a job as an assistant manager in a restaurant, gain experience, and then work her way up to manager.

Michelle is a CCWVa Adult Education Instructor who has been working with Chrystal for the past several months. She says her favorite part of her job is encouraging and cheering on learners as they reach for their goals. “I love to help them realize they had it within them all along. That they could always do the stuff that they imagined,” said Michelle. “I love to see them gain confidence and excel in a variety of fields. Some examples of certificate programs offered are WV Welcome (for hospitality careers), Food Management, Customer Service, and several computer literacy certificates. “We also work with people who are applying for college,” says Michelle. “We can help them prepare for the ACT or SAT.”

Chrystal is just one person who has found the support she needed to make positive changes in her life. She is looking forward to the future, confident in her ability to thrive on her new path in life.

Por Cindy Wooden, Catholic News Service

CIUDAD DEL VATICANO (CNS)—Papa Francisco dijo que su corazón estaba roto por la noticia de que al menos 19 niños y dos adultos fueron asesinados por tiros en una escuela primaria de Texas, y dijo que era hora de decir “¡Basta!” y promulgar leyes más estrictas en la venta de armas.

Al final de su audiencia general semanal el 25 de mayo, con miles de personas reunidas en la Plaza de San Pedro, el papa rezó públicamente por las víctimas del tiroteo del día anterior en la Escuela Primaria Robb en Uvalde, Texas.

"Con el corazón destrozado por la masacre en la escuela primaria de Texas, rezo por los niños y adultos asesinados y por sus familias", dijo el papa a la multitud.

"Es hora de decir, ′Basta′ al tráfico indiscriminado de armas", dijo el Papa. "Trabajemos todos para asegurarnos de que tales tragedias nunca vuelvan a suceder".

She earned a bachelor's degree in education from Seton Hill University and a master's degree in reading and language arts from the University of Pittsburgh. Sister Mary Denise ministered in a variety of educational ministries including teacher, principal, supervisor and religious education director at La Purisima Conception Parish in Lompoc, California.

In 2005, the Sisters of Charity asked Sister Mary Denise to collaborate with the Seton Hill University Art Program to create the Seton Arts Service Corps, an endeavor to develop a concept of service, in light of the Vincentian-Setonian tradition, and to understand the potential for service to communities through the arts.

An author of several articles for the Catechist magazine and co-author of Study Skills for Elementary Schools, Sister Mary Denise received certificates of recognition for outstanding catechetical presentations in Japan, Korea and Germany. She was also recognized for her outstanding service at a home for abused girls in Phoenix, Arizona. She was a volunteer at Renda Services and at the Literacy Council of America.

In reflecting on her life as a Sister of Charity, Sister Mary Denise said, “From the day I entered I have loved being a Sister of Charity. I am so grateful for the numerous opportunities I have had to use my formation, my education and my experience to serve others.”

Sister Delphine Kennedy, CSJ

Delphine’s parents, both originally from Davis County, Kentucky, moved to Akron, Ohio after they married and began their family. Theresa Delphine Kennedy was the third of five children. She grew up in Akron, where her family attended Immaculate Conception Parish. Delphine attended Highland Park Elementary School, then Kenmore High School where she pursued secretarial training, graduating in 1948. After graduation, she worked for several years at Goodway Express and C.P. Hall Chemical Company.

During those years, on Sundays Delphine drove her aunt and uncle to visit her cousin, Ellen, who had joined the Sisters of St. Joseph in Cleveland. It was during one such visit that Delphine came to realize that there was more to life than working and dating, and she made plans to enter religious life herself.

Delphine received the habit and the religious name, Sister Mary Pauline, in 1952. She attended St. John College, earning a BSE in 1961 and an MSE in 1968. From 1955 to 1980, Delphine taught or served as principal at six different schools throughout northeast Ohio. 1950s - St. Rose, Cleveland. 1960s — St. Bridget, Parma Heights; St. Anthony, Parma; St. Vincent de Paul, Elyria, as both teacher and principal. 1970s — St. Wenceslas, Maple Heights; St. Francis de Sales, Akron, principal. 1980s — Immaculate Conception (Cleveland) and Immaculate Conception (Akron).

One summer, Delphine visited Appalachia with her classmate, Sr. Rita Mackert, and fell in love with the simplicity of life and the hardworking people there. The experience planted a seed in her heart, and in 1980, Delphine and her good friend, Sr. Dorothy Turk, decided to go to Appalachia for their ministry. After one year in Beattyville, Kentucky, they moved to Elizabeth, West Virginia, where they ministered as co-directors of St. Elizabeth Church from 1981-91. They offered Bible study, home visitation for the elderly and sick, and worked with teenagers in the area. They were also involved in the building of a new parish church. Delphine quickly learned the importance of listening to people, paying special attention to their needs, and offering help where needed, always respecting their dignity.

In 1991, Sisters Delphine and Dorothy were invited by the Glenmary Home Missions to Logan, OH in the Hocking Hills. Delphine established and set up a kindergarten at St. John School and became its first kindergarten teacher; she also served as principal. In 1995, both were asked by the Divine Word Missionaries of Clay County, West Virginia to minister in the town of Maysel at Risen Lord Church. Delphine and Dorothy were especially grateful to be working together, since this was an isolated and poverty-stricken area.

Sisters Delphine and Dorothy moved to Barberton, OH in 1999 to be closer to family. For 12 years they served the elderly, the sick and the homebound in the St. Augustine and Sacred Heart Church communities. Delphine’s last residence was at St. Joseph Center.

Delphine enjoyed hiking, swimming, yard work, cleaning, playing cards and dominos, reading, and learning to crochet. She regularly attended family gatherings and kept in touch with her nieces and nephews. Her travels took her across America and around the world. Delphine was very appreciative of the opportunities she had. Her quiet way, deep faith, and trust in the Lord was her strength. She loved wherever she was missioned and enjoyed the people with whom she worked. Teaching children, reaching out to the poor, and touching people’s lives were all a part of Delphine’s faithful and loving service.
