Pope: Time is Running out to Fix Economy, Protect the Earth, Help the Poor

By Cindy Wooden, Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The predominant global economic system is “unsustainable,” particularly in its impact on the environment, Pope Francis said.

“We are faced with the moral imperative — and the practical urgency — to rethink many things” about the economy: “how we produce, how we consume, our culture of waste, its short-term vision, the exploitation of the poor, indifference toward them, the increase of inequality and its dependence on harmful energy sources,” the pope said Oct. 10 as part of the global TEDx Countdown on climate change.

The event, broadcast live on YouTube, featured more than 50 speakers from around the world presenting “actionable and research-backed ideas, cutting-edge science, and moments of wonder and inspiration,” according to the program description.

With scientists, climate activists, actors, singers, poets, politicians and comedians, the program looked at the state of the environment, predictions about how little time is left to alleviate climate change and about the role of individuals, businesses and governments in taking action.

“As the term ‘countdown’ suggests, we must act urgently,” Pope Francis said. “Each one of us can play a valuable role if we all set out today — not tomorrow, today.”

Correction

In the story on St. Bernadette’s in Hedgesville becoming a parish, Father George Pucciarelli was mistakenly left out of the story. Father Pucciarelli has been described as “an important part of St. Bernadette’s past, present and future.”

Time ...

“Science tells us, every day more precisely, that we need to act urgently — I am not exaggerating — this is what science tells us, if we are to have any hope of avoiding radical and catastrophic climate change,” he said. “This is a scientific fact.”

As he did in his 2015 encyclical letter, “Laudato Si’, on Care for Our Common Home,” Pope Francis insisted in his TEDx talk that concern for the environment must go hand in hand with concern for the people who live on the Earth, especially the poor, who are most impacted by climate change and natural disasters.

People must make a choice “between what matters and what does not,” a choice between continuing to ignore the suffering of the poorest and mistreating our common home, the Earth,” he said, or “commit ourselves at every level to transforming the way we act.”

While science insists on the need to change to protect the planet, he said, “our conscience tells us that we cannot be indifferent to the suffering of the poorest, to growing economic inequalities and social injustices.”

Pope Francis asked his global audience to begin “a journey of transformation and action,” one “made not so much of words, but above all of concrete actions that cannot be postponed.”

“It will be necessary to go step by step,” he said, “to help the weak, to persuade the doubtful, to imagine new solutions and to commit oneself to carrying them forward.”

The pope explained that the “integral ecology” he has called for — responding to the cry of the poor and the cry of the Earth — requires seeing how “everything in the world is connected and that, as the pandemic has reminded us, we are interdependent on one another, and also dependent on our mother Earth.”

Presenting a three-part action plan, the pope said change must begin with “education for the care of our common home, developing the understanding that environmental problems are linked to human needs — we must understand this from the very beginning: Environmental problems are linked to human needs.”

So, he said, education must include both scientific data and ethics.

Next, he said, priority should be given to water and food, ensuring access to safe drinking water and adequate food for all the world’s people.

The third proposal is that of energy transition: a progressive replacement, but without delay, of fossil fuels with clean energy sources, he said. “This transition must not only be rapid and capable of meeting present and future energy needs, but also must be attentive to its impact on the poor, on local populations and on those who work in the sector of energy production.”

Socially responsible investing and stockholder activism, he said, can make companies see “the unavoidable need to commit themselves to the integral care of the common home.”

The pope recommended divestment from stock in “companies that do not meet the criteria of integral ecology and rewarding those that are making concrete efforts in this transition phase to put at the center of their activities criteria such as sustainability, social justice and the promotion of the common good.”

New Report Details Abuse, Assault Allegations against Catholic Composer Haas

By Maria Wieiring, Catholic News Service

ST. PAUL, Minn. (CNS) — A report detailing sexual abuse and assault allegations against Catholic musician and composer David Haas describes him using his influence as a faith leader in grooming victims/survivors and suppressing press reports or concerns about his behavior.

The report also alleges Haas sexually abused minors, including the claim he raped a 13-year-old girl in 1979 during a confirmation retreat in the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The advocacy group Into Account published the 22-page report Oct. 1. It includes graphic descriptions of victims/survivors’ claims, including forced sexual acts and unwanted touching.

The report alleges that, between 1979 and 1982, when Haas was in his early 20s, he targeted girls ages 13 to 17 for sexual acts, including rape. After 1982, reported allegations include grooming of girls under 18 and grooming, unwanted attention and touching, and forced sexual acts with women between the ages of 18 and 60.

Haas is a well-known composer of contemporary church music, including “You Are Mine,” “We Are Called” and “Blessed Are They.” From 1999 to 2017, Haas led Music Ministry Alive!, a liturgical arts camp independent from, but held at, St. Catherine University in St. Paul. Haas has led concerts and retreats and participated in conferences around the United States.

He also directs the Emmaus Center for Music, Prayer and Ministry in Eagan, Minnesota, and has worked in campus ministry in two high schools in the archdiocese.

In an Oct. 11 email to The Catholic Spirit, the archdiocesan newspaper, Haas, through an attorney, said he reiterated an apology he issued in July, and denied the claim he raped a 13-year-old girl.

“The new allegation in the Into Account report as referenced in the archdiocese statement that I sexually abused and raped a 13-year-old girl is absolutely false. It is an anonymous allegation and an attempt to smear me with an outrageously false allegation. I have never had improper sexual contact with a 13-year-old girl,” he said.

In June, Haas denied Into Account’s allegations, calling them “false, reckless and offensive.” In July, he issued an apology that said he had “come to realize that I have caused great harm to a variety of people.”

In the Oct. 11 email to The Catholic Spirit, Haas said he wants people whom he’s harmed to know he takes “full responsibility for my actions and am truly sorry.”

“I am continuing with professional intervention to help me face and understand how my actions have violated your trust,” he said, speaking to those whom he’s hurt.

“I have continued to give prayerful thought to my actions and ask for forgiveness from anyone I have harmed — those individually and those in the church community who have been harmed because of these accusations,” he said. “I believe in the God who loves all of us and pray for anyone I have harmed and pray for God’s forgiveness.”

In an Oct. 8 statement, Tim O’Malley, director of ministerial standards and safe environment in the archdiocese, called the report “disturbing.”

“We affirm and emphasize the importance of courageous survivors of abuse telling their story publicly,” he said. “History has shown that confronting sexual abuse leads to a better future and promotes justice. Hopefully, that proves to be the case here.”

O’Malley said that prior to Into Account’s report, his office was unaware of the 1979 rape allegation. The Into Account report claims the alleged victim and an adult reported the incident to church officials, including Archbishop John R. Roach, on three separate occasions. The late archbishop led the archdiocese from 1975 until his retirement in 1995; he died in 2003.

O’Malley said that professional investigators, all former law enforcement personnel, reviewed the archdiocese’s files and did not locate a report of the claim. The office has alerted law enforcement about the allegation, he said.

In the Oct. 8 statement, O’Malley encouraged anyone with information about criminal behavior to immediately report it to police. He also reiterated information he shared in two prior statements this year, following a May 2020 letter circulated by Into Account first publicizing the allegations.

In 2018, the archdiocese received reports that Haas had allegedly made noncriminal, sexual advances on two young adult women in another state. O’Malley said his office interviewed the women and allowed Haas to address the reports. The archdiocese then told Haas that he was not allowed to provide his services to Catholic institutions in the archdiocese without disclosing those complaints, and it declined to provide a letter of recommendation that he requested.

In a June 16, 2020, statement, O’Malley also acknowledged a complaint the archdiocese received in 1987 that “Haas made unwanted sexual advances toward a young adult woman,” which Haas denied.

The October report from Into Account, which is based in Kansas and led by Stephanie Krehbiel, described the incident as a “sexual assault of an 18-year-old first-year woman student at the College of St. Benedict” in St. Joseph, Minnesota, for which Haas was required to write a letter to the victim-survivor’s parents.

In July 2020, after receiving additional complaints that Haas had “engaged in inappropriate conduct” with other young women at various locations around the country in the 1980s, the archdiocese notified Haas that he was no longer allowed to provide his services at Catholic institutions in the archdiocese.

The archdiocese also discontinued using Haas’ compositions at archdiocesan liturgies, and encouraged parishes and schools “to consider the sensitivities involved with using Haas’ music.”

Seventeen other dioceses and other Christian groups have made similar decisions. Liturgical music publisher GIA Publications announced in June that it had ended its longtime relationship with Haas, a prolific composer.

Into Account’s report was based on reports of 44 women, including Haas’ former wife Jeanne Cotter, a fellow liturgical musician to whom he was married from 1988 to 1995. In a June 21 Facebook post, Cotter said they began a relationship when she was 16 and he was 23, and that they divorced because of Haas’ infidelities.

The report’s authors described Haas’ sexual behavior toward his victims as aggressive and sudden, with a focus on vulnerable women.

Women who raised alarms about signs of grooming — such as an abundance of personal communication, sexual conversations or excessive physical affection — were told by others that those behaviors could be dismissed as “That’s just David.” The report claims that women who resisted his advances received or feared Haas’ retaliation in their professional or social lives.

The report also includes allegations that Haas spirituality manipulated girls and women, in part through Music Ministry Alive!, a five-day camp for teenagers ages 14 and older.

According to the report, participants had “a cult-like reverence for Haas,” who created emotionally intense prayer and small-group sharing situations, where Haas gained information he could use to allegedly assess participants’ vulnerability. The report claimed that Haas groomed girls during the camp, and then would later assault them when they were young adults.

In an Aug. 4 statement to its community, St. Catherine University said that while his camps were held on its campus, Haas has never been a member of the university’s faculty or staff. It said the university was investigating its relationship with Haas and allegations involving Music Ministry Alive! and “will take action pursuant with university policies and legal guidelines” if it finds any abuses have taken place.

In an Oct. 9 statement, the university said it “believes the victims who have come forward to share their experience” and its investigation continues.
Catholic Activists Applaud Encyclical’s Stance against Death Penalty

By Carol Zimmermann, Catholic News Service
WASHINGTON (CNS) — Pope Francis tackled several issues in his new encyclical, but the section devoted to ending capital punishment was particularly cheered by U.S. Catholics who oppose the death penalty.

The pope reiterated how St. John Paul II had described the death penalty as “inadequate from a moral standpoint and no longer necessary from that of penal justice,” but then went further by adding: “There can be no stepping back from this position.”

“Today we state clearly that ‘the death penalty is inadmissible,’ he wrote, quoting from the revised Catechism of the Catholic Church, and adding: ‘The church is firmly committed to calling for its abolition worldwide.’

Sister Helen Prejean, a Sister of St. Joseph of Medaille and longtime anti-death penalty activist, said in a tweet Oct. 4, the day the encyclical was issued at the Vatican, that she was pleased with the pope’s ‘ringing proclamation of the inviolable dignity of all human life, even the life of murderers.’

She also said she was “heartened by the church’s unequivocal opposition to governments’ use of the death penalty in all instances.”

Over the years, Sister Prejean met with St. John Paul II and Pope Francis urging them to establish the Catholic Church’s position as unequivocally opposed to capital punishment. In 2018, Pope Francis announced new language of the catechism that says the death penalty is inadmissible because it is an attack on the inviolability and dignity of the person, with no exceptions.

She also noted that Pope Francis not only addressed the death penalty in all instances, but he warned against becoming “obsessed with taking revenge and destroying the other” and reminded the document’s readers that “nothing is gained this way and, in the end, everything is lost.”

Vaillancourt Murphy said the encyclical highlights a number of social concerns and the need to build a culture of encounter, which she said points to “a more restorative way of understanding harm and violence.”

This approach, she added, centers on the people and relationships that were violated and seeks “justice that values human dignity, healing, accountability and the hope of redemption for all involved.”

Beatified Teen Showed that Heaven is ‘Attainable Goal,’ Cardinal Says

By Junno Arocho Esteves, Catholic News Service

ASSISI, Italy (CNS) — Thousands sang and applauded as Italian teen Carlo Acutis was beatified in a town dear to him and to many Christians around the world: Assisi.

During the Oct. 10 beatification Mass, Italian Cardinal Agostino Vallini, the papal legate for the Basilica of St. Francis and St. Mary of the Angels in Assisi, read Pope Francis’ apostolic letter proclaiming Acutis’ “blessed,” the step before canonization.

“With our apostolic authority, we grant that the venerable servant of God, Carlo Acutis, layman, who, with the enthusiasm of youth, cultivated a friendship with our Lord Jesus, placing the Eucharist and the witness of charity at the center of his life, henceforth shall be called blessed,” the pope decreed.

After the reading of the apostolic letter, the newly beatified teen’s parents, Andrea Acutis and Antonia Salzano, processed toward the altar carrying a reliquary containing their son’s heart.

Pilgrims flocked both to the Basilica of St. Francis for the beatification Mass as well as to the Shrine of the Renunciation at the Church of St. Mary Major, where the newly beatified teen’s remains were on display for veneration.

Men and women, boys and girls passed by the tomb quietly, some stopping to pray the “Our Father.” A young toddler blew a kiss goodbye to the young blessed as she passed by.

Known as the site where a young St. Francis renounced his father’s inheritance and embraced poverty, the shrine — like the city of Assisi and St. Francis himself — held a special place in Acutis’ heart.

The teen loved St. Francis “very much,” his mother, Antonia Salzano, told Catholic News Service Oct. 9. St. Francis “was a very Eucharistic soul who used to attend Mass twice a day,” and her son sought to imitate that same Eucharistic devotion throughout his brief life.

Archbishop Domenico Sorrentino of Assisi reflected on the link between the two saintly figures, and proclaimed that by “providential design, (St.) Francis and (Blessed) Carlo are now inseparable.”

“Carlo’s life — always united to Jesus — his love for the Eucharist, his devotion to the Holy Virgin, his making friends with the poor, brought him closer to the spirituality of the Poor One,” St. Francis, Archbishop Sorrentino said at the end of Mass. “Both invite us to live according to the Gospel.”

The liturgy was held inside the Basilica of St. Francis, but measures to prevent the spread of COVID-19 meant that most of those attending sat outside on seats set three-feet apart, watching on big screens.

Many young men and women came to Assisi for the beatification. For many of them, the fact that a normal teen could be beatified was a source of hope and inspiration.

“With his life, Carlo made me see that despite the small or even great difficulties — like his illness — that we could live a full and happy life if we keep our eyes looking up toward heaven,” said 19-year-old Rosanna, who was among those attending the beatification.

In his homily, Cardinal Vallini said that Acutis’ beatification “In the land of Francis of Assisi is good news, a strong proclamation that a young man of our time, one like many, was conquered by Christ and became a beacon of light for those who want to know him and follow his example.”

Reflecting on the teen’s life, Cardinal Vallini said that like most young people his age, Carlo was a “normal, simple, spontaneous, friendly” teenager who used modern forms of communication to transmit the “values and beauty of the Gospel.”

“For him, ‘the internet was not just a means of escape, but a space for dialogue, knowledge, sharing and mutual respect that was to be used responsibly, without becoming slaves to it and rejecting digital bullying,’” the cardinal said.

Cardinal Vallini said that Blessed Acutis was a model of virtue for young men and women today, reminding them not to seek “gratification only in ephemeral successes but in the perennial values that Jesus proposes in the Gospel.”

“He gave witness that faith does not distance us from life but immerses us more deeply in it and showed us the concrete way to live the joy of the Gospel,” the cardinal said. “It is up to us to follow it, attract by the fascinating experience of Blessed Carlo, so that our lives may also shine with light and hope.”
Vatican Updates Transparency Laws to Strengthen Financial Management

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Continuing its efforts to combat money laundering and financial mismanagement, the Vatican amended its transparency laws and expanded the role of its financial watchdog agency in monitoring financial transactions.

According to a statement released Oct. 10, the Vatican said it updated its legislation, more commonly known as Law XVIII. Passed in 2013, Law XVIII regulated financial activities and paved the way for collaboration and an exchange of information between the Vatican’s Financial Information Authority, known by the Italian acronym AIF, and its international counterparts, and monitored financial transactions.

In an interview with Vatican News published Oct. 10, Carmelo Barbagallo, a seasoned Italian finance inspector who was appointed to lead AIF by Pope Francis in late November, said the updated law followed an anti-money laundering directive adopted by the European Union in 2018.

According to the European Commission’s website, the directive enhanced “the powers of the EU Financial Intelligence Units and provides them with access to broad information for the carrying out of their tasks.”

Vatican Gathers Ambassadors to Hear What is Happening in Syria

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — As the world’s attention is focused on the COVID-19 pandemic and its dire economic consequences, the Vatican urged nations not to forget the people of Syria, who are still living in a situation of violence and extreme need.

In an extraordinary move, the Vatican invited diplomats accredited to the Holy See from around the world to meet Oct. 15 with Cardinal Mario Zenari, nuncio to Syria.

“The appointment was an opportunity to rekindle attention toward the situation in Syria, which has been prostrated by almost 10 years of violence,” the Vatican said in a statement issued hours after the event ended. The Vatican did not say how many ambassadors attended the meeting.

Cardinal Zenari told the ambassadors that while the war and suffering in Syria had all but disappeared from the “media’s radar,” the humanitarian disaster continues. After the destruction of rocket fire, he said, the nation now faces the threat of the “bomb of poverty,” according to the Vatican statement.

The nuncio said some 80% of the population is living in poverty and an estimated 11 million Syrians require humanitarian assistance. Syria is an “expanse of ghost villages” strewn with rubble, he said, and “many Syrians have lost hope.”

Pandemic Increases Risks of Human Trafficking, Exploitation, Speakers Say

ROME (CNS) — While the COVID-19 pandemic has shut down or slowed most businesses, it does not appear to have put a dent in human trafficking, said Callista Gingrich, U.S. ambassador to the Holy See.

In fact, the financial difficulties many families face around the world actually make people more vulnerable to traffickers’ offers of quick cash or false promises of good jobs in other lands, said speakers at the U.S. Embassy to the Holy See’s symposium Oct. 14, “Combatting Human Trafficking: Action in a Time of Crisis.”

Faith-based organizations “are among some of our best partners” in the push to end trafficking and assist the victims, Gingrich said, pointing specifically to Talitha Kum, the international network involving some 2,600 women religious and their collaborators around the world.

Loreto Sister Patricia Murray, executive secretary of the women’s International Union of Superiors General, said the poor who are susceptible to traffickers are “doubly vulnerable” during the pandemic, when many more families are facing hunger.

“It’s estimated that an additional 130 million (people) will fall below the poverty line this year, and I suspect that that is an optimistic figure,” she said.

In Confirmation Hearings, Barrett Stresses Commitment to ‘Rule of law’

WASHINGTON (CNS) — During the two days of questions from members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Judge Amy Coney Barrett made a clear distinction between policy preferences and legal precedents. She also did not give direct answers on how she would vote on top issues but assured the senators that she would follow the rule of the law.

“My policy preferences are irrelevant,” she said, Oct. 13 when asked if she had intended to dismantle the Affordable Care Act, and she reiterated this same view when asked about abortion and same-sex marriage.

On the opening day of the hearings, Republican senators had adamantly emphasized that Barrett’s Catholic faith should not be a factor in questioning, and on the start of the first day of this inquiry, it clearly wasn’t a topic, although it was mentioned. Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-South Carolina, committee chairman, asked Barrett if she would be able to set aside her religious beliefs to fairly decide legal cases. “I can. I have done that in my time on the 7th Circuit,” she said. “If I stay on the 7th Circuit, I’ll continue to do that. If I’m confirmed to the Supreme Court, I will do that.”

Archbishop Aymond Reconsecrates Church, Altar; Calls Priest’s Acts ‘Demonic’

PEARL RIVER, La. (CNS) — In an act of solidarity with the 350 parishioners of Sts. Peter and Paul Church in Pearl River, a visibly upset New Orleans Archbishop Gregory M. Aymond celebrated Mass Oct. 10 for a second consecutive week for the parish and reconsecrated its church and its new altar.

The parish had learned a week before that its 13th pastor appointed in July 2019, Father Travis Clark, was arrested Sept. 30 for alleged obscenity with two women in their church. Before he began celebrating Mass, Archbishop Aymond reiterated to those present his shock and anger over what happened — calling Father Clark’s behavior inside the church obscene.

He said he knew the Sts. Peter and Paul parishioners were shocked and angry, too. “The desecration of this church and altar is demonic, demonic,” he said. “Let me be clear, there is no excuse for what took place here. It is sinful, and it is totally unacceptable. Travis has been unfaithful to his vocation; he’s violated his commitment to celibacy; and also, he was using that which was holy to do demonic things. He will not be able to serve in priestly ministry, and he will not be able to serve as a priest anytime in the future.”
A Pastor’s Reflection on Fratelli Tutti

By Father Andrew Switzer

As 2020 begins to wind down, it is time for prayerful reflection on all that is unfolding around us. Just a week ago, we, the Catholic community, and all people of good will received an extraordinary and faith-filled guidance to help us through these difficult days. Pope Francis shared with us a new encyclical on Fraternity and Social Friendship.

Yes, it’s a long document but is an excellent and necessary read. We have printed out some copies, which are available at the Church and Office for those who need to pick one up. This is only the second encyclical entirely written by Pope Francis and it may well be the most complete guidance of his pontificate. The symbolic signing of the document on the feast day of St. Francis, October 4th, already prepares us for the reception of a special Franciscan message for our times.

What is an encyclical? These days, the scope of an encyclical letter (literally, a message to be circulated) reaches out to all people of good will: Catholics, Christians, Jews, Muslims, Buddhists, as well as agnostics and atheists, all our brothers and sisters with whom we share our common home and, together with whom, Pope Francis has listened and dialogueued. Our response, therefore, as Catholics to such a document is to try our best to make a sincere effort to assimilate the given teaching into our personal and community convictions. Not always an easy task, but one which requires a prayerful openness towards the Pope’s message.

The encyclical emerges from a deep awareness and approach towards the signs of our time. You too are familiar with them: respect for all life at every stage, coronavirus, war, want, the death penalty, as well as the responses of polarization and fear, love and dialogue. Our Pope does not shy away from the tough issues, but embraces deeply the joys and sorrows of our world so as to better respond to them with Gospel wisdom, ever new and ever inspired by God’s Spirit at work in God’s pilgrim people.

I want to just focus on one part of the document that is especially important. Pope Francis affirms that we can do a lot to bring healing in our world by recovering our ability to dialogue. The faith community in a sense should be a microcosm for society where people of different views and perspectives can come together, even if they disagree, and exchange ideas. Pope Francis emphasizes that even in disagreement, we should be open to see the best in others.

I remember when I was in junior high, I had a great history teacher, who taught us that a debate is not a fight. A debate is a dialogue, and after a good debate we may leave with some disagreements, but that we are able to find some common ground. We should not be afraid in a debate if our perspective broadens and changes as we exchange ideas with the other person. That is the constant gift of dialogue. I can, truly, say that some of my greatest friends have at times shared ideas different from mine; they have helped to expand my horizon and deepen my understanding of self and others.

Growth is often painful; the tendency of just fighting and giving in to the temptation to be outright mean, is very strong. I have never felt good about myself when I have been closed to some opinion in a downright mean kind of way. While we must disagree sometimes, let us be kind! Let us walk onwards and together with each other as Christians who love one other. I think that if this happens in our community and pews, we are living the mission statement of St Agnes as an inclusive community, contributing to a society of dialogue and inclusiveness. We are also listening to Pope Francis’ spiritual guidance in Fratelli Tutti.

Father Finnell Offers Talk on ‘Being a Priest in a Pandemic’ at Charleston Serra Meeting

By M. A. Sadd KCiHS

CHARLESTON—A seasoned Kanawha Valley pastor shared what he called a priest’s particular blessings and challenges during the enduring season of Covid-19 pandemic that affects nearly every facet of our temporal and spiritual lives.

“The foundation of my spirituality is how I witness the dying and rising of our parishioners in the Paschal Mystery of Christ,” Father John H. Finnell explained during a recent talk to the Serra Club of Charleston whose members met under diocesan safety protocols at St. John XXIII Pastoral Center.

The pandemic underscores his love for and admiration of his parishioners and gives opportunity for proper Christian response to it, said Father Finnell, 69, who was ordained a priest in 1978. Father Finnell is the pastor of Blessed Sacrament Church in South Charleston.

“Is there an opportunity for us to value life a little better?” he asked during his talk. “Does it make us not take other people for granted?”

He daily feels a lack of physical presence and social proximity with his parish family, but offers his isolation as a dying and rising to new life with Christ.

Father Finnell says he has quickly learned the value, sometimes overlooked, of the little daily tasks that others took on for the glory of God and in service to others. “I appreciate these people so much more,” he said.

As the pandemic has motivated him to learn how to do more with less, “there will be more need than ever to have new skills,” he said. “It is not a bad thing that new and unexpected things come at us.”

One of them has been to become more adept at the tools of technology and mass communication. “I have to die to the notion that I am computer illiterate,” he said. “That is a wonderful thing.”

Father Finnell has gained a stronger appreciation of the power of newer modes of connecting with people. He has embraced narrow and broadcasting tools including live-streaming every Mass from his parish. That commitment that gives spiritual communion for now many people unable to communicate the Blessed Sacrament.

He has been delighted to learn that many more people view weekday Mass from his church during the pandemic than who attended before the crisis. In times of hardship, he asked, “how can you argue with that?” More than ever, shut-ins, the elderly and even non-Catholics are hearing the Word of God and witnessing the Catholic liturgy. “This is a marvelous outcome,” he said.

He lauded the diocesan and national safety protocols for Catholics who have returned to Mass, even though the Sunday obligation, for the time being, remains suspended. They are working, he said, while some other non-Catholic congregations do not embrace the discipline that the Church has demonstrated.

Father Finnell called on all people of the Faith to participate in the Church’s response to the pandemic, a new urgency to act and speak. “If something is missing, speak up about it,” he said.

The founder of the Knights of Columbus, Father Michael J. McGivney was a central figure in the growth of Catholicism in America, and he remains a model today. His example of charity, evangelization and empowerment of the Laity continues to bear fruit and guide Knights of Columbus around the world.

During his visit to the United States, Pope Benedict XVI cited Father McGivney as a key figure in “the impressive growth” of the Church in the United States, stating, “We need but think of the remarkable accomplishment of that exemplary American priest, The Venerable Michael McGivney, whose vision and zeal led to the establishment of the Knights of Columbus.” Through the spiritual genius of Father McGivney, the Knights of Columbus has become a way for Catholic men to transform friends into brothers—brothers who care for one another.

In his letter to Brothers in Christ of the Diocese of Wheeling-Charleston on January 24, 2020, Bishop Mark E. Brennan, Bishop of Wheeling-Charleston, stated “We men need to band together and work with one another to serve God and our neighbor. He told us that President John F. Kennedy reminded us: “On earth God’s work must truly be our own.” The Bishop continued, “the Knights of Columbus are an excellent way to be formed as brothers in Christ and to do God’s work on earth. I urge you to consider becoming a Knight of Columbus.”

Today more than 2 million members of the Knights of Columbus and their families, and many others around the world, continue to seek out Father McGivney as a heavenly helper in times of need. His heroic virtue was recognized in 2008 by the Vatican, which named him a Venerable Servant of God, and on May 26, 2020 Pope Francis approved a decree for a miracle attributed to his intercession, opening the way for Father McGivney to be Beatified on Oct 31, 2020. A second approved miracle is needed for him to be canonized as a saint of the Catholic Church.

In honor of the Beatification, the Knights of Columbus Supreme Council has announced that they will be offering free membership to everyone joining On-Line through December 31, 2020. Our West Virginia State Deputy, Paul Niedbalski, is asking all eligible Catholic men to join the Order during these very challenging times. Knights must be practicing Catholic men at least 18 years of age. Consider becoming a Knight and help us help our sisters and brothers in need. To join the Knights Go To www.kofc/joinus and use the Promo Code MCGIVNEY2020.

Those who knew him best in life saw in him both a “genial” countenance and a man with an “iron will” to achieve the good. In sum, Father McGivney’s founding of the Knights of Columbus “attests to the love in which he held for his brothers and sisters in Christ.”
Composer Hopes Concert Offers a Little ‘Shelter from the Storm’

By Colleen Rowan

A little “shelter from the storm.” That’s what Catholic Composer Stephen Pishner hopes people will get from his concert “Songs of Grace for the Soul,” which is part of the National Association of Pastoral Musicians’ (NPM) Lunchtime Concert Series on YouTube.

It seems like the world is being tossed and turned right now on many fronts,” Pishner said. “I hope the music that I did in this lunchtime concert could serve as a 30-minute retreat for people, at least for the time the music lasts.”

The Lunchtime Concert Series may also be found on NPM’s facebook page and features various pastoral musicians, known and unknown, from around the country. Pishner was contacted by NPM in an e-mail request for pastoral musicians to consider submitting some of their music that could be reviewed and then decided upon, as to whether they would be in turn asked to do a lunchtime concert.

“I did six songs (all originals) in about 30 minutes,” said Pishner, who serves as director of Music and Liturgy at All Saints Parish in Bridgeport. “I also showcased a new one called ‘Tu Eres Mi Otro Yo’ (You are my other self). It has one Spanish lyric in it, and I build off of that thought in English.”

Pishner’s concert, “Songs of Grace for the Soul,” is based on the title of his recent liturgical music album.

“The songs, you might say, are a reminder that God has not forgotten us but is faithfully right beside us, even though it may be hard to feel at times,” Pishner said.

His concert was pre-recorded in Wheeling at Jamie Peck Productions, and may be viewed on YouTube by typing in “Lunchtime Concert Series with Stephen Pishner, Songs of Grace for the Soul.” The link to view the concert on YouTube is: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=p43BXWtRNk&ts=175s

Empowering Miss Paulette

By Trina Bartlett, Catholic Charities West Virginia Eastern Regional Director

Before Paulette arrived at Catholic Charities West Virginia’s Martinsburg office, she had, in her own words, “been in several shelters, homeless programs, counseling, jail and the psych ward.” The first assistance Catholic Charities provided for Paulette was acquiring a C PAP machine in March 2019, and a few months later she met case manager Luci Hernandez and decided she wanted to participate in case management.

When she entered case management in November 2019, Paulette had three goals: to obtain her high school equivalency, to find a better place to live, and to improve her health.

The first task Paulette undertook was finding better housing. She was living in a substandard apartment, and the toilet didn’t work. She attended budgeting classes with Catholic Charities partner organization, Telamon, and was able to find a more adequate apartment in a better location. She continues to work on her other goals.

When talking about her experience with Catholic Charities, Paulette said: “I didn’t have family here. I did not have the genuine family support, and I now see Catholic Charities like a family. I feel supported and accepted here. I came across a community event and met Ms. Luci. She had a booth with different things that Catholic Charities did. As we began to talk. I felt more comfortable speaking to a woman of color. Little did I know the beautiful working relationship that we would have. Being in case management gives me the motivation to work on myself knowing that I have someone that supports me. I feel empowered going into my meetings and getting a chance to get out of my home and into the community.”

Paulette and Luci have continued to meet weekly even throughout the pandemic.

Por Junno Archo Esteves, Catholic News Service

ASI, Italia (CNS) — Miles de personas canta
ron y aplaudieron mientras el adolescente italiano Carlo Acutis era beatificado en una ciudad querida por él y por muchos cristianos de todo el mundo: Asís.

Durante la misa de beatificación del 10 de octubre, el cardenal italiano Agostino Vallini, legado pontificio de las basílicas de San Francisco y Santa María de los Ángeles en Asís, leyó la carta apostólica del papa Francisco, proclamando “beato” a Carlo Acutis, el paso antes de la canonización.

“Con nuestra autoridad apostólica, concedemos que el venerable servidor de Dios, Carlo Acutis, laico, que con el entusiasmo de la juventud cultivó una amistad con nuestro Señor, y que, litúrgicamente, como el Evangelio, la Eucaristía, la comunidad y el Recierto y el testimonio de la devoción en el centro de su vida, de ahora en adelante sea llamado beato”, decretó el papa.

Después de la lectura de la carta apostólica, los padres del adolescente recién beatificado, Andrea Acutis y Antonia Salzano, se dirigieron hacia el altar, llevando un relicario que contenía el corazón de su hijo.

Los peregrinos acudieron en masa tanto a la Basílica de San Francisco para la Misa de beatificación como al Santuario de la Renuncia en la Iglesia de Santa María la Mayor, donde los restos del adolescente recién beatificado se exhibían para veneración.

“Hombres y mujeres, niños y niñas pasaron silenciosamente junto a la tumba, algunos deteniéndose para rezar el ‘Padre Nuestro’. Una niña pequeña se despidió del joven beatificado envolviéndole un beso al pasar.

Conocido como el lugar donde el joven San Francisco renunció a la herencia de su padre y abrazó la pobreza, el santuario, así como la ciudad de Asís y el mismo San Francisco, ocupaba un lugar especial en el corazón de Acutis.

El adolescente amaba a San Francisco “mucho”, expresó su madre, Antonia Salzano, a Catholic News Service el 10 de octubre. San Francisco era un “hombre joven de nuestra era, uno como muchos, fue conquistado por Cristo y se convirtió en un faro de luz para aquellos que quieran conocerlo y seguir su ejemplo”.

Reflexionando sobre la vida del adolescente, el cardenal Vallini indicó que, como la mayoría de los jóvenes de su edad, Carlo era un adolescente ‘normal, sencillo, espontáneo, amistoso’ que usaba formas modernas de comunicación para transmitir los “valores y la belleza del Evangelio”.

“Es inusual que los padres (estén presentes) en la beatificación de su hijo o hija”, expresó Salzano a Catholic News Service el 9 de octubre. “Es muy usual porque normalmente toma mucho tiempo. Pero en cambio, para Carlo tomé 14 años tener la beatificación”.

La beatificación de Acutis, declaró, es “un paso importante para nosotros porque tenemos tantos devotos de Carlo en todo el mundo. Creo que eso es un gran señal para ellos, un gran consuelo. Es muy, muy importante que tengamos este reconocimiento de la iglesia”.

Wheeling Hospital Installs Additional Safety Measures at ER Entrance

WHEELING — Wheeling Hospital has upgraded its safety measures to protect patients, visitors and employees by installing metal detectors at the Emergency Room entrance.

“Implementing safety measures, especially those that have the ability to detect weapons, is a proactive measure, and an industry best practice,” hospital CEO Douglass Harrison said. “This can assist in reducing the possibility of tragic incidents happening.”

Wheeling Hospital is a firearm-free facility with the exception of on-duty law enforcement officers. Any person with a valid carry permit and found to be carrying a firearm will be asked to return the firearm to their vehicle.

All visitors, patients and employees, whether off or on duty, who are entering the building through the Emergency Room entrance are required to go through the metal detector each and every time they enter.

Patients entering with obvious life threatening emergencies are allowed to bypass the metal detector. Unconscious, critically ill or seriously injured patients need not be scanned. Patients arriving via ambulance enter through the ambulance area and will not pass through the detector.

While research further indicates metal detectors have no adverse effects on medical implants and pregnancies, patients with pacemakers or other medical issues may request to bypass the metal detectors and be scanned with a wand. Signage is available for patients meeting this medical condition. Anyone entering in a wheelchair or with the aid of a metallic walker or cane is scanned with a wand.

People activating the metal detector are asked to empty their pockets of all metallic objects and instructed to re-enter the detector. The metal detector will show zones of activity that indicate specific areas of the body where metal are present. If there’s a second activation, the officer conducts a scan with a wand. Subsequent activations will be handled on a case-by-case basis. The same applies to children, and any wand scans will be done in the presence of the parent/ guardian/adult they are accompanying.

All baggage, brief cases, purses, backpacks, sacks, baby carriers, patient gifts, etc., are inspected for weapons by the security officer at the metal detection post. Anyone declining searches are not allowed to bring the articles into the facility and are asked to place the items back into their vehicle.

COVID-19 visitation restrictions also remain in place, with all visitors and staff required to wear masks in all areas of the hospital and observe social distancing. The Gift Shop and cafeteria remain closed to visitors.
